PROSECUTOR RACE IS HOT AND CLOSEST

Collins and Westover Expected to Be High Men In Battle of Ballots

YOUNG IS STRONG

Mrs. Belle Spangler Seems To Have Edge In Race For Collector of Taxes

THE GENERAL POLITICAL situation in Orange county from every point of view has many cross wires and uncertainties. The supporters of C. C. Young declare that they are certain of carrying the county and site instances of many people being for the governor who four years ago were not, and newspapers being favorable that were unfavorable four years ago. The Buron Fitts supporters, however, contest this, and declare that he will carry the county, and without question he has many friends and there is some evidence of their contention.

In the last few days, however, it is generally believed Young is gaining at Fitts' expense. The same may be said of Rolph, who, while it is admitted he will not carry the county, it is expected he will receive a considerable vote. His visit to the county did not create enthusiasm, and there seems to be little more claim for his support since he was here than before. Mrs. Clara Shortridge Foltz will probably get some scattering votes, but there is no pronouncement for her.

For the Lieutenant-Governorship, it lies between Carnahan and Frank F. Merriam.

For Secretary of State there is not much being said. There is a woman running for this office who is able and efficient, Dr. M. Len Hutchins. She is strongly supported by the W. C. T. U.

Riley Is Favored

For Controller, the general talk seems to favor Riley.

For Treasurer, the contest lies between Smith and Charles G. Johnson. Charles G. Johnson has a negro opponent in the person of Augustus J. Johnson, and in view of the fact that Charles G. is commonly spoken of as "Gus," it is going to interfere with his vote, but Charles G. has the number (1) before his name.

The contest for attorney-general seems to be between Charles A. Son and U. S. Webb. Charles A. Son has many friends in the county, and will get strong support. U. S. Webb has been on the job for many years; has done some very fine work for the state, and there are many who are for him.

For the state board of equalization, the present incumbent, H. G Cattell, who is from Pasadena, has three contestants from Los Angeles, and will have a difficult time in pulling through, though he is a well equipped man, and deserves support.

BELIEVED PRINCE OF WALES TO TERMINATE BACHELORHOOD

Birth Of New Princess Is Reason Given

Desire of Empire That Heir Finally Select Bride Is Increased

LONDON, Aug. 23.—(UP)—London's attention was centered once again today on the possibility that the Prince of Wales will soon terminate his bachelorhood.

The fact that the latest member of the royal family is a princess rather than a prince, as generally had been hoped, was believed by many persons to have increased the desire of the empire that the British heir finally select a bride.

The recent years, however, have greatly narrowed the scope of the prince's choice. The Swedish princesses, Astrid and Martha, who

WIFE JAILED FOR KILLING HUSBAND

PLACERVILLE, Calif., Aug. 23.—(UP)—Found dead in the burned remains of a cabin 13 miles east of here, Ben Pitts, 50, Indian, was believed today to have been the victim of a murder.

His wife, whose black eye and bruises were mute signs of a struggle, was held by police.

Mrs. Pitts claimed no knowledge of the murder, but a fresh 30-30 rifle with a fresh break in the stock, found in the brush near the cabin of the couple, was declared by District Attorney Henry S. Lyon to be sufficient evidence to hold the woman.

An inquest will be held today by Coroner James B. Blair.

Calvin Coolidge Says

BY CALVIN COOLIDGE
Former President of the United States

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Aug. 23.—Few people not intimately connected with the clergy realize the additional burdens which are imposed upon that devoted profession by business depression. Being the natural repository for the troubles of the unfortunate, which strain their strength and resources for relief in ordinary times, any increase of such demands puts on them a very disproportionate share of the general distress. Yet they meet it effectively and cheerfully with little regard for the needs of themselves and their dependents.

Many of us regard the clergy as a natural blessing, always serving others, never seeking their own, self sustaining like the sun and air. This attitude makes their compensation meager and provision for old age inadequate. That is the general lot of all teaching forces. They are too little appreciated.

In every generation the clergy have furnished the spiritual leadership on which has rested both the political and economic progress of the times. They are the main source of the best standards of civilization. Without their influences the nation would fall into a state of moral and material decay. If not for their sakes, certainly for our own we should give them more appreciation and better support.

HOPI INDIANS TO STAGE DANCE SUNDAY

HOTEVILLE, Ariz., Aug. 23.—(UP)—Swift Indian runners came panting to the sacred kivas of medicine men today as they prepared for the annual Hopi Indian snake dance, Sunday, to pray for rain.

Hundreds of snakes, buzzing rattlers and hostile bull snakes were held awaiting tomorrow's ceremonies when scores of painted Indians will prance about huge fires with wriggling reptiles in their mouths.

INCOME CUT TO REMAIN THIS YEAR

MELLON IS HOPEFUL

Chief Executive Says There Are No Grounds to Report Deficit Exists

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—(UP)—President Hoover apparently is determined to continue tax reductions established last year if it can be done without borrowing money to balance the national budget.

Whether this objective can be gained seems to be a question upon which the treasury itself changed its mind within 24 hours.

A day of hurried conferences and formal statements now leaves the subject exposed in its most favorable light, with Mr. Hoover and Secretary of Treasury Mellon optimistic for continuance of the 1 percent reduction effective last year on corporate and normal individual income taxes.

With 16 more primary elections and three state conventions still pending preliminary to the November congressional elections, the treasury department's anonymous indication two days ago that the 1 percent might have to be collected next year created a considerable stir in Washington.

Conferences at the treasury led to a discussion between Mr. Hoover and Undersecretary of Treasury Mills at the White House. Mills lunched with Governor Young of the Federal Reserve Board and returned to his office to issue a statement in Mellon's name.

"I have a very real hope that we may be able to make such a recommendation to the congress next December," said Mellon's statement after asserting it is "altogether too early" to say definitely that the reduction can be maintained. The statement protested the reports in morning newspapers regarding revenue prospects and the possible abandonment of the reduction.

Within two hours, Mr. Hoover had added a more emphatic statement to the tax situation.

"I can state," he said, "that there is no ground now for the predictions in the press this morning that a deficit was impending which would prevent the continuance of tax reduction established last year."

RESIDENT HERE IN 1869 DIES IN SAN DIEGO

A PIONEER OF Santa Ana who came here from Texas in 1869 when he was but nine years of age and whose father built one of the earliest homes in this city, today had joined the host of other early settlers who have passed on. William O. English, 78, who more recently has lived at San Diego, died yesterday, having been ill for the past two or three years.

His life and that of his family were intimately and actively connected with the founding and early growth of this city. The home which his father, Robert English, built on Sycamore street, between Second and Third streets only recently was torn down, having served for years as a blacksmith shop after the family moved to other quarters.

Mr. English had lived here all his life when he moved to San Juan Capistrano, where he remained for many years. When he left there a few years ago it was to be with his daughter, Mrs. J. B. Stephenson of Descanso.

Among those who survive Mr. English in Santa Ana is Mrs. Margaret Spurgeon, a sister, and widow of the late W. H. Spurgeon, founder of this city. Other survivors are Mrs. Edmund West, 323 South Garnsey street, a granddaughter; Robert English of Howard Springs, Calif., a brother; Elizabeth English of San Diego, a granddaughter; and James, Billy, Martin, Eric and Gene Stephenson, grandsons of Descanso.

Funeral services will take place at 11 a. m. on Monday at Chino, where a number of Mr. English's relatives and friends reside. Interment will be at Pomona.

C. C. Young's Name Last On Ballot

In rotating the names of candidates on the ballots as required by law, the name of Milton K. Young, Democratic candidate whose name also appears on the Republican ticket, is listed first in Orange county and this congressional district for the Republican nomination as governor.

Attention of Republican voters is called to this fact so that those intending to vote for the incumbent, Gov. C. C. Young, will use care in not marking opposite the first Young name. That of C. C. Young is last on the list. Mark opposite the last name and not the first.

BROOKLYN SPORTS WRITER SUCCUMBS

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Aug. 23.—(UP)—Abe Yager, sports editor of the Brooklyn Eagle and dean of New York baseball writers, died at his home here last night.

Yager was born on July 13, 1870. He went to work as a cub on the Brooklyn Eagle at the age of 15 and became sports editor in 1886. He held that title from then until his death.

He wrote of the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1886 and 1887. That was before they entered the National league. He was one of the first writers to travel about the circuit with a team and thus became well known and liked in the cities having league representation. He was the first official scorer for the Dodgers and held that position for 30 years from 1890 to 1920.

FIRST CRASH IN AIR RACES OCCURS TODAY

CURTISS WRIGHT AIRPORT, Chicago, Aug. 23.—(UP)—Fritz Loose, famous German ace, crashed in his big Junkers airplane today as the 10th annual air races, the "Olympiad of the Air," opened.

Loose crashed as he attempted to land his big plane at the north end of the field. He was uninjured. The motor failed and the plane fluttered and fell about 20 feet. The undercarriage was torn away but the plane otherwise was not damaged.

Loose, one of the many fliers who came from abroad to lend an international note to the air spectacle, had been having trouble with the motor of his ship all morning. He was coming down to stand at attention for the flag raising that marked the formal opening of the meet, when the craft faltered and crashed. He walked away as mechanics swarmed onto the field to remove the crippled ship.

The ceremonies of inauguration went on as if nothing had happened. Old Glory fluttered up the flagpole.

Racing planes were wheeled to the starting line from the pits in front of the grand stands where 1,000,000 spectators are expected to see aviation's greatest show.

A cloudless blue sky canopied the mile square airport, which was groomed to lawn like smoothness for the wheels of the fastest and hardiest of planes.

Marcel Doret, French ace, treated the early arrivals to some breathtaking stunting as he tried out his 450,000 franc plane for the first time in American air.

The Claims Of The Only Woman Contestant

We have refrained editorially from coming out on behalf of one candidate as against another unless we felt there was some positive principle involved in the contest. We have our personal preference on candidates just as every one else has, but we do not believe that simply because one happens to be in charge of a newspaper that he should use the powers and prerogatives of his editorial position to help one candidate into office as against another candidate who is equally worthy and well-equipped.

But there is one candidate among all of the candidates running for county office whom we feel every man and woman can well vote for, and realize that they are doing a fine service for the county, and a worthy act for themselves. Mrs. Belle J. Spangler is the only woman contestant for a public office in Orange county. Mrs. Spangler is well-known to the people in Santa Ana and pretty much over the entire county, and she is known because of her activity in all those enterprises which are for the good of the community and particularly for the good of the public schools.

She has given of her time to every worthy enterprise. Unfortunately, her circumstances have changed in recent months and she has found herself loaded with all of the responsibilities of the head of the family, without income other than that which she must earn. But this brave woman met this burden in the same heroic spirit that she has undertaken every other enterprise that has been thrust upon her, and she has kept the home and has made it possible for her two daughters to continue in school.

Some of her friends urged her to become a candidate for county collector of taxes. They knew she was well-equipped for this position. She has had a clerical and banking training. She has done fine work at various times as an executive in campaigns for bond issues and other similar enterprises, and when the Parent-Teacher Association officers and members in large and enthusiastic numbers urged her to announce herself, she was finally persuaded to do so. She has been making the canvass as far as she has been able, but for the last two weeks the serious illness of her mother has handicapped her from seeing as many of the voters as she might otherwise have met.

Surely the people under all these circumstances should with one voice express by their vote for Mrs. Spangler their appreciation for a public-spirited woman, well equipped for the position, for whom the office at the present time would be a godsend.

We urge upon you men to exercise your gallantry now and you women your loyalty, and all together cast our votes for one eminently fitted by years of training for this very position and one who will have the greatest reason to appreciate it and be thankful.

Tustin Hills Orange Pool Gross Return $514,898

SHIP 198 CARS OF ORANGES TO EARLY MARKET

The Tustin Hills Citrus association mailed out checks to growers this week on 1798 cars of Valencias shipped during the first pool of the organization, which started April 24 and ended July 9, it was announced today by B. A. Crawford, manager.

The first pool shipments brought $514,898.31, f. o. b. The cars represented 90,267 boxes of fruit.

The association expects to add 175 cars to the total before the season closes. The plant is working on the second pool at present. This pool will be closed about the first week in September.

All of the oranges were for domestic use, no shipments being made to foreign countries. The plant is shipping 21 to 22 cars of Valencias each week.

Excellent prices are being received for the fruit throughout the middle west and east, Crawford said.

were once mentioned as possibilities, have married into the royal families of Belgium and Norway, and the Netherlands crown princess, Juliana, has been reported engaged to Prince Wilhelm Ernst von Erbach-Schoenberg, her second cousin.

The Spanish infantas Beatrice and Maria Christina, often have been mentioned as possible brides of the prince, but such gossip has been curtailed recently because of religious difficulties, in view of the fact that they are Catholic.

Almost the only eligible still mentioned in connection with the prince are Princess Ingrid of Sweden and Lady May Cambridge. It was recalled, however, that Princess Ingrid and the British heir were often together in 1929 without the rumored announcement of an engagement.

Lady May, the daughter of the Earl of Athlone, is a favorite in London and with her aunt, Queen Mary, but she spends most of her time in South Africa, where her father is governor general and meets the prince only infrequently.

The prince, moreover, has appeared to enjoy greatly his bachelorhood and has indicated that he would marry only when and if his heart prompts him to do so. At present there are no such indications.

CANDIDATES TO MANY OFFICES END CAMPAIGN

Assemblyman. There is no contest for members of the county committee of the Republican ticket. There are no contests for any of the judgeships nor for justices of the peace.

For county superintendent of public instruction, there is a contest between Ray Adkinson of Santa Ana, who has many friends, and who is known to be well-equipped for the position, and R. P. Mitchell, the present incumbent, who has conducted the office with merit and efficiency.

The county clerk, Joe Backs, has no opposition.

There are seven candidates for sheriff. For quite a period of time, it seems that the two outstanding leaders in the sheriff's race were Sam Jernigan, incumbent, and Logan Jackson of Orange. They still are considered by many to be the two leading candidates, and yet within the past eight or ten days J. M. Pearson, chief of police of Fullerton, and Leo Porter of Fullerton are showing up as being very possible contenders. R. J. McFadden has strong support in Anaheim and vicinity and outlying territory, and friends scattered through the county. W. R. Sylvester, is also spoken of as a real contender with many friends. The issue of law enforcement has entered into this contest with Logan Jackson and J. M. Pearson openly endorsed by the Law Enforcement league.

Justine Whitney for recorder has no opposition.

Lambert Active

For auditor, W. T. Lambert has conducted a rather active campaign, while the present incumbent, W. C. Jerome has not been very active. Jerome states that he believes that a public servant who has done good work should not have to make a campaign.

For assessor, the contest has entered the newspaper stage to a very large degree, through a series of advertisements put out by the backers of George D. Montgomery against the present incumbent, James Sleeper. The advertising is claimed by Sleeper's friends to be false of its implications and some parts of it entirely untrue, and it is generally believed that Sleeper because of his capabilities and knowledge of the values and fairness to the people will be re-elected.

The contest for district attorney has become fairly intense, lying primarily, it is believed, between Sam L. Collins of Fullerton, and Harry C. Westover of Santa Ana. Mr. Collins is a deputy in the district attorney's office, has many friends who are working for him. It is confidently believed that he will be one of the two high men for the position of district attorney.

District Attorney

It is believed by many and generally stated in Santa Ana, that Harry C. Westover will be one of the two run-off men for district attorney, while at some points it is declared that R. E. Haynes will contend for this honor, and still others believe that D. G. Wettlin will be a contender, but the preponderance of opinion is that Tuesday evening the reports will show Collins and Westover as the two contenders.

For tax collector, the contest lies between J. C. Lamb and Belle J. Spangler. In this case one can hear for either candidate. The Parent-Teachers association and independent organizations and many groups are for Mrs. Spangler, while Mr. Lamb, who has been in office for many years has many friends who desire to se him remain. This is one of the offices, however, where a change is expected by many throughout the county.

For treasurer, the contest is divided, and one can hear most anything, for each one of the candidates, Abbey, Joplin and Trago, have their friends who declare that their man is going to win.

Elizabeth Milwaukee Milwaukee a

Two men are running for surveyr —"Cap" Hillyard and W. G. Knox, former manager of Santa Ana. The predictions are made both ways in this race, but the general opinion seems to favor "Cap" Hillyard.

For public administrator and coroner, J. G. Berneike and Charles D. Brown are the contenders. It is expected that Charles D. Brown will win.

For constable of Santa Ana township it is a "horse-race" except for Jess Elliott, whose outstanding record and known qualifications for the office are expected to elect him on the ballot at the primaries.

Supervisor Race

In the supervisorial districts there are three in which there are contests. In district number two, John C. Mitchell, the present incumbent, and J. A. Armitage are contesting for the position. It is believed it will be close.

In the fourth district, where Willard Smith is the present incumbent, he is opposed by Frank Snowden. The friends of Willard Smith are claiming that he will be elected by a vote of two to one, but on the other hand the friends of his opponent do not concede this, and declare there will be some surprises in the vote on Tuesday.

In the fifth district, there has been a very strong contest conducted by Jeffery, Wallace and Lucas, with Artz quite active during the past few weeks and Sauers and Fenelon somewhat less so. In the minds of the people of the fifth district Wallace and Jeffery represent the political machine, while the other candidates are running with this support or handicap as one may look upon it. It is useless to quote predictions, as the friends of each declare that their candidate has a walkaway.

TOO MUCH GOLD IN COFFERS OF FRANCE CAUSING WORRY

PARIS, Aug. 23.—(UP)—A flood of gold threatened today to cause the Bank of France as much worry as did the decline of the franc five years ago.

Realizing fully the truth of the old adage that there can be too much of a good thing, the Bank of France has been unable to stem the inrushing tide of precious metal that has filled its vast underground storehouses almost to the limit.

Paradoxically, the almost uninterrupted influx of gold in the last 12 months has reached a point where French economists have more anxiety than foreign experts.

With France second to the United States in gold, the weekly statement of the Bank of France yesterday showed the gold reserves to be 46,952,230,408 francs, which is a new high peak of 52.17 percent in the ratio of gold to paper currency. The legal minimum ratio is only 35 percent.

The Bank of France cuts its discount rate to 2 1-2 percent in an effort to direct French capital to other countries offering higher rates, but the gold flood continued to rise and threaten to overflow the vaults which have been provided with the most elaborate safety system and patrol of guards in history.

A. camp, next Monday. At the same time the Orange county family campers will come back from a 10-day period at the mountain refuge which started August 15.

Over 60 persons stayed at the camp throughout the period, while many families came and went, staying only a few days. Several hikes and trips to the different lakes surrounding the camp were on the program. A class in basket weaving was conducted by Mrs. R. R. Russick, wife of the local director of physical education. Archy Raitt, secretary of the Fullerton Y. M. C. A., was in charge of the camp for the first week but Ralph Smedley, local secretary, left for camp last Friday to take charge for the remaining three days. Enough musical talent is present at camp to compose a small orchestra.

The Hi-Y camp will be in charge of Junior Schultz, boys' secretary from Redlands. A full capacity of about 80 boys is expected. The week will be spent in organizing, conducting and maintaining the Hi-Y work and making future programs. The boys who will represent Santa Ana are Bill Rasmussen, John Hoy, Ray Nowatney, De Esten Fin, Fred Eley, Robert Tannenbaum, Milford Carmen and Bill Kistinger. There is still room for a few more if they desire to go, said D. H. Tibbals, boys' secretary, here.

Court Notes

Jane Bjorkman filed a complaint in superior court today asking a divorce from Walter E. Bjorkman, whom she charged deserted her on Dec. 1, 1928. They were married in 1921.

Thomas D. McKeehan today filed a suit against Harry H. Culver, et al, asking judgment for recision of a contract and repayment of $1358.47 he said he had paid for property in University City under the contract. He charged that the defendants falsely represented that there would be certain development in the district within a specified time and that they declared they could resell the property for him at a profit of $4000.

Speed marked the granting of a divorce to Mrs. Ione Tunison Peek, from Arnold Peek, Santa Ana butcher. Mrs. Peek was granted her interlocutory decree in superior court yesterday, the same day she filed the complaint. Cruel and inhuman treatment was charged by the plaintiff.

URGES VOTERS TO ELECT HER TAX COLLECTOR

Urging Orange county voters to cast their ballots for Mrs. Belle Spangler, candidate for tax collector, when they go to the polls next Tuesday, Mrs. J. V. Kelsey, of Garden Grove, talked last night over KREG. Mrs. Kelsey is a former president of the fourth district Parent-Teacher association, a member of the board of directors of the Orange County fair and is in charge of the women's departments in the fair.

There is probably no person running for public office in Orange county better equipped for the office which he or she seeks than is Mrs. Spangler," the speaker said. "She is not self seeking. She would have been unable to carry on this campaign at all were it not for the hundreds of loyal friends she has made during her residence in Orange county."

Mrs. Kelsey's talk follows:

"It is indeed a great pleasure to speak on behalf of the candidacy of Mrs. Belle Spangler for Orange county tax collector.

"There are some things that I can say to you in this personal way that are difficult to say through ordinary advertising methods. Mrs. Spangler is a noble, refined, well educated, able woman. She not only speaks the English language but speaks and interprets Spanish langue as well, she is well equipped for the position she seeks. She has unfortunately been thrown entirely upon her own resources. She has two daughters, whose education must be completed. This and all other of her obligations Mrs. Spangler is bravely and beautifully meeting.

Public Service

"Those of us who have become acquainted with her who have watched her good work relating to the various civic organizations, such as the Society for Crippled Children, Parent-Teacher association, Women's clubs, all of which she is a member, Chamber of Commerce and to every fine cause to which the citizens, the fathers, mothers and children should be interested, have been very anxious that she be known and that her claim to the position of tax collector might be known.

Business Career

"Mrs. Spangler has had 10 years' banking experience. She is thoroughly acquainted with every phase of clerical work. She has executive ability, has on many occasions directed others in various forms of service. There is probably no person running for office in Orange county better equipped for the office which he or she seeks that is Mrs. Spangler. She is not self seeking. She would have been unable to carry on this campaign at all were it not for the hundreds of loyal friends she has made during her years of residence in Orange county.

"The friends that have known her in the activities in which she has engaged. These have contributed of their time in making the voters acquainted with her, as far as possible, and others have contributed of their means to pay for advertising and other expenses so that the voters may have this opportunity of voting for this capable woman, and thereby have a fine servant, and she in turn might realize that her womanhood, her interest in th home, and her devoted life are appreciated.

Only Woman Contestant

"She is the only woman contestant running for office in Orange county. With 19 offices to fill only one other of the 19 has a woman occupying it. We feel that it is only fair and right, regardless of how you voters may vote on any question, to cast a vote for Mrs. Spangler for this office for which she is so eminently fitted.

"Mrs. Spangler has not been able to conduct as strong and active a campaign for the last two weeks as she might have done were it not for the fact that her mother, living with her, is so seriously ill as to fear that she might not last through any particular day. Mrs. Spangler, when she could, has carried on all fine public enterprises, faithful as a mother, she has been showing the same devotion at this crucial time for her mother.

"I am sure every voter who knows the facts and who knows the capabilities of Mrs. Spangler will cast his or her vote for her and in so doing will be more certain that his vote has performed a fine service than for any other candidate for whom he will vote on primary election day.

Efficient Servant

"I am sure there is no obligation that the voters are under that would interfere with our voting for Mrs. Spangler. It is entirely possible that he who has been elected to this office for now some 24 years may in the selection of Mrs. Spangler to continue the work finally be grateful for it, in seeing a woman, well equipped, deserving and capable to carry the office on. It is possible that he may be thankful then, that at the end of this long period, he has been given the opportunity for a rest and recreation with a knowledge that the office with whom he has been so long connected is in capable and faithful hands.

"I am sure when the voters of Orange county place Mrs. Spangler as county tax collector she will devote her entire time to the duties of her office in an efficient and conscientious manner.

"I urge all voting citizens of Orange county to exercise the right that belongs to them as American citizens, that of casting his or her vote next Tuesday, August 26th, and in so doing I especially urge whatever else you do place your cross opposite the name of Belle Spangler for collector of taxes."

FULLERTON

Enjoy Beach Party

Members of the Business and Professional Women's club of Fullerton were guests at an afternoon swim and pot-luck dinner at Newport when Mrs. Jack McCarthy was hostess to the group at the McCarthy summer home. Quantities of dahlias and fragrant rose geraniums, Japanese lanterns, gingham checked luncheon cloths on small tables and favors of miniature weather vane whistles lent an air of festivity to the beach home.

Mrs. McCarthy greeted her guests, wearing scarlet beach pajamas. Her small daughter, Alice, also wore a beach pajama outfit. Following the dinner the group gathered on the sand before a large bonfire. Miss Carrie Adams opened the business session when it was decided that the organization would meet September 7 at the home of Mrs. Lola Richman. A discussion occupied the group regarding possible means of raising additional funds toward the upkeep of the Fullerton child the business women are to send to the county health camp.

Following the business session marshmallows were toasted around the fire.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Thomas Vail, of Anaheim. She was unattended. The couple will make their home in Courtland, where they are both on the high school faculty.

Mrs. Quinn is well known in this city, having been graduated from the junior college here, later attending the University of Southern California. She taught in the grammar school in San Bernardino for two years and has been on the Courtland high school staff for two years.

HIGHER HURDLE SCHEDULED FOR LAW STUDENTS

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—A proposal to place a higher hurdle in the path of legal novitiates by adding an educational clause to the present requirements for admission to the California bar will be considered by the State Bar association at its September 20 meeting in Pasadena.

The recommendations were embodied in a report of the amendments committee released today by Hubert T. Morrow of Los Angeles, chairman.

The proposed amendment provides that any citizen 21 years old and of good moral character with a state residence of at least three months and who "possesses the necessary qualifications of learning," is entitled to admission.

It is also provided that an examining committee appointed by the board of governors shall ascertain the qualifications and conduct necessary examinations.

The educational requirement to be fixed by this board shall not, under the proposal, exceed:

Graduation from a high school or proof that the applicant possesses the equivalent of such an education in intellectual competency and achievement;

Graduation from a law school, or proof that the aspirant to legal practice has studied law at least for four years.

The report pointed out that the educational requirement is not unreasonable because the rule for school attendance is alleviated by the fact that evidence of "intellectual competency and achievement" is sufficient to allow the applicant to take the state bar examination.

The education hurdle is a new state legal rule inasmuch as the old law contains no educational requirements at all, but simply stipulates that the applicant must have studied law in good faith for three years.

California, it was said, has been trying for years to raise the stnadards for legal education. The leeway given by the state bar act of 1927 was closed again last year when the Legislature deprived the state bar of its right to fix educational requirements.

In explaining the new attitude, the committee stated:

"The practice of law is so intimately connected with, and so influences governmental problems and social questions of the nation, that admission to the practice must be considered at least as much from the public standpoint as from the desires of the individual who asks the privilege of entering the profession."

DIVORCES LOWERED BY MARKET CRASH

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—(INS)—Indications that married couples contemplating divorce are declaring temporary truces because of financial woes resulting from the stock market crash are seen in statistics here.

The figures show that both the number of divorces granted and the amount of alimony awarded decreased materially during the first six months of 1930, as compared to the same period last year.

In superior court where most divorce cases are tried, there was a decrease of 15 per cent in the number of divorces granted during the six months period. In the same court, alimony awards were $564,612, as compared to $977,245 for the first half of 1929.

The circuit court showed an increase of 4 per cent in divorces for the six months ending July 1.

Buries Skunk But Won't Open Grave

SANTA CRUZ, Aug. 23.—(INS)—"Hurry!" a distressed voice gasped over the phone today to Officer Walter Munn. "It's awful!"

"Quite so," sadly agreed Munn upon arrival. "It's worse."

A late pole cat lay on a fine residential street.

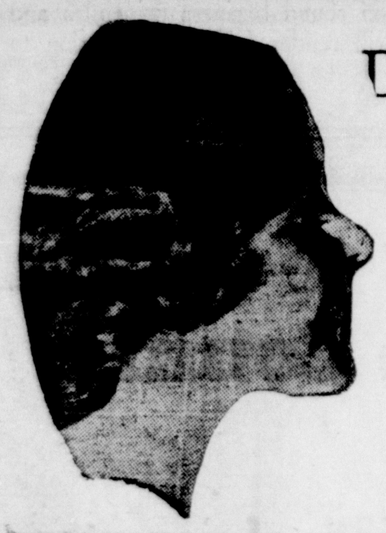

But Officer Munn knew how to meet an emergency. He quickly disposed of the late one under a few feet of a nearby vacant lot, when—

"Dig that right up," demanded the irate lot owner. "Or I'll sue you and the city for committing a nuisance."

"You'll have to call the fire department," instructed Munn, and went right away.

50-PASSENGER PLANE

LONDON, Aug. 23.—A 50-passenger monoplane is being built here and is expected to be finished by the end of the summer. It will be powered by six engines and will have a non-stop range of 2000 miles. The engines, it is said, will develop 5000 horsepower. They are being built by Rolls Royce.

RUSSIAN WOMEN RENT OUT BABES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—(INS)—Babies are being rented in Russia, but not for the purpose of being fondled by childless women, the National Geographic Society was told by its representative in that country.

They are demanded by women who want a preferred place in the lines in front of stores in trading row, Moscow, where cloth, overshoes and othe articles of which there is a limited supply, are rationed for sale by the government.

The women shoppers merely regard the children they rent as a necessity, the society's agent wrote, and quickly dump them into the arms of their peasant mothers when they are through feigning motherhood and have made their purchases.

LUCAS DIRECTS FINAL TALK IN SUPERVISORIAL CAMPAIGN AT 'ROYAL HOUSE OF ORANGE'

The last big gun of his supervisorial campaign was fired last evening at the Laguna Beach Legion hall by Stuart H. Lucas, candidate for supervisor for the fifth district.

Ralph J. Frost, head of the Lucas for Supervisor club, in Laguna, acted as master of ceremonies, and called the meeting to order and introduced George Dunham, jr., secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.

Dunham stated that the man he was about to present had proven himself a fighter in the battle over the dam project a year ago, and that he felt sure that the conditions that existed now showed the need of a fighter and that on these grounds he was backing the candidate. He then presented Lucas.

Lucas' address was short and to the point, touching the high spots only, and he concluded with the following story:

"A good many years ago in one of the books that I was made to persue, there appeared a story of a mighty king who lived in a walled city on both banks of a great river. This king was rich and at the head of a mighty people, and from a long period of prosperity had become intolerant of the rights of his subjects and his neighbors. He spent his time in revelry and evil doing, and one night in the midst of a drunken orgy there appeared on the wall the words, 'mene, mene, tekel upharsin.' For a time no one could translate the words, but finally it was found that they meant, 'thou are weighed in the balances and found wanting!' Soon after the enemy fell upon them and they were put to death.

"We have a correllative condition here. 'The Royal Family of the House of Orange' has flourished and grown fat until they have become arrogant and take unto themselves god-like attributes, believing that they can say unto this man 'Go,' and he goeth, and unto that 'Do this,' and he doeth it.

"A year ago they saw the handwriting on the wall 'mene, ment tekel upharsin.' This night I will translate for them the message, 'Thou are weighing in the balances and art found wanting.' Next Tuesday surely shall the opponents fall upon thee and smite thee sorely. God hath numbered they kingdom and finished it."

After several questions had been satisfactorily answered, the card tables were brought out. Bridge and five hundred were enjoyed.

CITY FILES SUIT TO CONDEMN LAND

Condemnation proceedings were instituted by the city of Santa Ana yesterday in superior court in an effort to obtain title to a triangular piece of property at the intersection of Bush street with Santa Clara avenue to provide better access to and from El Portal street, a continuation of Santa Ana boulevard, which comes into Santa Clara avenue at this point.

Defendants in the action are Charles E. Chatlain, Lulu B. Chatlain, E. W. Hoag and Stella Hoag. The track extends 19.4 feet along Santa Clara avenue and 18.3 feet along Bush street, and is located at the southwest corner of the intersection. By cutting off the corner which it is shown by the map attached to the complaint is intended to be done, a jog is to be eliminated in the opening of El Portal into Bush street.

The suit follows action of the city council taken August 11, ordering the condemnation suit in order to widen Bush street at its intersection with Santa Clara avenue.

Ed Adkinson, county fire warden, issued a warning today to all motorists, campers and hunters that on September 1, the north half of the Whiting and McFadden ranches would be closed to all trespassers because of the fire hazard.

A special forest ranger will be stationed in the closed area which is north and west of El Toro until the fire hazard season is over. All motorists planning to enter this area are urged to postpone their trip or see Adkinson.

Bible Class Will Hear D. G. Wettlin

D. G. Wettlin, candidate for district attorney, will address the members of the women's Bible class of the First Methodist church here tomorrow morning.

The class is one of the largest in the city and the talk will wind up Wettlin's campaign.

ORANGE VOTERS ARE ADDRESSED BY CANDIDATES

Candidates for the offices of district attorney and sheriff met with more than 200 Orange voters at the Women's club at Orange last night. The meeting was one of the best attended to be held since the opening of the campaign.

Candidates who made talks included Sam Jernigan, James L. Pearson, Ralph McFadden, William Slyvester, Logan Jackson and Hugh Porter, a representative of Leo Porter, for the office of sheriff; and D. G. Wettlin, Harry Westover, Sam L. Collins and R. E. Haynes, candidates for district attorney.

"The prime requiste for district attorney is not experience," stated Harry Westover, in his talk before the Orange voters. "What is needed is a man of integrity, a man who cannot be led astray by any group, a man of honesty who believes in the rights of all the people. That is the kind of man who is needed in this campaign."

"I stand for law enforcement and if I am elected district attorney, the law will be enforced, and the chips can fall where they may," he said.

Wettlin spoke just after Westover and immediately disagreed with the speaker on the point of experience. He stated that experience for the office was one of the prime factors in selecting a district attorney and then reviewed the duties of the district attorney's office, pointing out why in his opinion, experience was needed.

Wettlin brought out the fact that the county of Orange was a larger corporation than any business in the county.

"If this were a private business, it would demand the best legal talent available, so it behooves the voters to elect the man who has had the most experience and the man whom they feel can best direct the legal end of such a business," Wettlin said.

Sam Collins told of his record during the past four years as a deputy district attorney under Z. B. West, jr., stating that he had handled a majority of the criminal cases and asked an investigation as to his ability and sincerity of purpose.

R. E. Haynes, candidate for district attorney, made his plea for the Orange votes on the strength of law enforcement, not only of one law but all the laws and promised clean sensible administration if elected.

MILLIONS SPENT ON PENNY CANDY

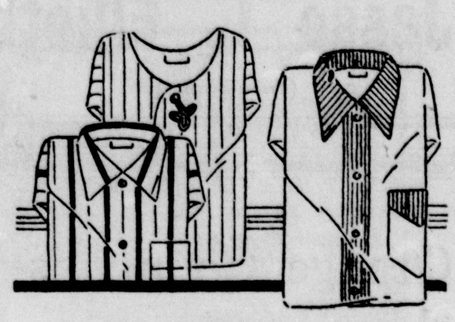

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Pennies passed across candy counters by American children amounted to the imposing total of $190,000,000, F. A. Bunte, Chicago candy manufacturer, declared in addressing a meeting of confectioners here.

More than 350,000,000 pounds of penny candies were purchased last year and there were more varieties of this type of candy placed on the market than ever before in the history of the confectionery business, Bunte said.

Penny confection sales, he stated, comprised 19 per cent of the year's business of confectionery men.

Boys and girls in small towns, the manufacturer said, buy the greatest amount of penny candy.

DAM BUILDING IS SPEEDED BY JAMES IRVINE

Speeding up its construction program in keeping with President Hoover's request for work to relieve the unemployment situation, the Irvine company today announced an earlier date for building two dams included in its $1,000,000 water conservation project.

Irvine had planned to follow construction of a dam in Santiago with these two projects but because of Hoover's request regarding employment, he has decided to start this fall.

The larger of the two dams, to be located within 1000 feet of tide water at the head of upper Newport bay, will cost approximately $115,000 and will be one of the most unique in the world, according to C. Roy Browning, engineer for the Irvine company, who designed the plans for both structures. The base will be only six feet above sea level and the greatest height will be 31.5 feet. It will make a lake more than two miles long, will store 12,000 acre feet of water below the spillway crest, and will drain a watershed of 116 square miles.

The other dam to be built this winter will be located in Peters canyon, near the old Santiago Golf club. It will store 1000 acre feet of water and hold the run-off from a watershed of about 1500 acres at an elevation of 535 feet. It will cost approximately $40,000 and will flood an area of 53 acres.

This reservoir also will act as a regulating basin in handling Irvine company water from the Santiago reservoir, which is to be built jointly next year with the Serrano and Carpenter Irrigation districts. It will be 50 feet high and of the rolled earth fill type.

Pumping plants and conduits to be built in connection with the dams will cost about $140,000.

The dam to be built at the head of the bay will be known as the San Joaquin Rancho Conservation dam. The total crest length of the dam will be 1800 feet between the hills. At the highest point in the dam it will be 260 feet thick on the base. It will be constructed by the rolled earth fill process with five to one and four to one slopes and, when completed, will resemble a flat hill extending across the valley.

The spillway will be of the Ogee type, with a concrete channel to the marsh, discharging about 250 feet below the lower toe of the dam. The capacity of the spillway at maximum flood stage will be 6000 second feet or 12,000 acre feet in 24 hours. Besides this amount the area of the reservoir above the spillway crest will act as a retarding basin and have a capacity of 7000 acre feet. Therefore the total spillway capacity will be probably twice any flood ever known.

The reservoir will have a maximum depth of water at the dam of 23.5 feet. When full the reservoir will be a lake more than two miles in length and averaging about three fourths of a mile wide.

One of the unique features of this reservoir is that there will be no outlet works at the dam for draining the water out. The land is so flat that a pumping plant has been designed for a point one mile up the reservoir from the dam, from which point all the water in the reservoir can be pumped through a pipe line approximately four miles in length to a central point in the valley. From the above point the water will be distributed and boosted to higher elevations.

The watershed draining into this reservoir extends from El Toro to El Modena and is 116 square miles in area. Being mostly valley floor and rolling hills and agricultural land, the runoff can not be compared with watersheds of like area in the mountains. However, the water is now going into the sea, being an economic loss and, although not a dependable water supply, Irvine is determined to make this saving.

The cost of this water will be more than pumping from the Irvine company wells, figuring interest and depreciation of the dam, pumping plant and pipe line and the cost of lifting the water from sea level and transporting same through four miles of conduit.

The Irvine company's outlay for the conservation of storm water during the next year will amount to more than $1,000,000.

Irvine has planned to follow the construction in Santiago with these two dams but, because of the urge of President Hoover to advance proposed construction and relieve the unemployment situation, he decided to start this fall.

The Public Forum

Communications under this heading must be signed by the name of the writer. These communications express the opinions of the writers of them. The opinions may or may not be the opinions of The Register.

To the people of Orange:

A short time ago there appeared in this paper an article in regard to the state taking over the Santa Ana canyon road. This road will then be known as the Santa Ana canyon boulevard and will extend from San Bernardino county to Newport, a distance of some 60 odd miles. This highway will be built where necessary, and maintained out of the gas tax funds, except in incorporated towns.

Recently, a petition was circulated in Orange to extend South Glassell street so that it might be joined to Grand avenue, at a short distance beyond Santa Clara avenue. This petition is now in the hands of the county surveyors, to whom it was addressed. The signers of this petition requested that this road be completed as soon as possible, consistent with fairness to adjacent property interests.

When this much needed improvement is completed, Olive, Orange, and Santa Ana will be in a position to ask and insist that the state highway department include Glassell street and Grand avenue in this projected Santa Ana canyon boulevard, especially as Glassell street and Grand avenue are the natural, logical and practical routes. This is particularly an opportune time for us to voice our wishes as regards to the routing of this proposed boulevard as there is to be a decision soon on this project. We have it on good authority that the state highway engineers may and probably have considered Tustin street. Tustin street would then be extended through Santa Ana canyon road, thereby leaving Olive, Orange and Santa Ana off this important projected artery of travel. This route if chosen not only deprives the people of the three towns of their natural benefits; but will involve a far greater expense than will be required to put Glassell street in shape to carry the existing traffic, and any increase for years to come.

Some people seem to think that since the state is taking over the road, that we who reside in this district and pay this gas tax, should rely wholly on the judgment of the highway department and its engineers. However, you and I and the other man make up the state; if we do not show our preference, as regards our highway, who will?

Orange has been too long off the beaten line of travel. Let us grasp this opportunity offered us to obtain this secondary highway; —a highway extending from the playgrounds of the San Bernardino mountains to our south coast beaches.

It is not altogether the dollars and cents to be derived from such traffic but there is an advertising value to a community, that cannot be obtained in any other way. Other towns in our county have benefited from highway traffic; why not Orange?

If the people of Olive, Orange and Santa Ana will recognize the importance of this project and unite to protect their interests, they can obtain the Santa Ana canyon boulevard.

We, the undersigned, as well as some 200 signers on the above mentioned Glassell street petition, consider this project of tremendous importance to the future growth of the city of Orange; and in all fairness there should be consideration and preference given where the majority are concerned. The completion of this project means either a loss sustained or a benefit gained.

SIGNED:

J. R. NUNN, 122 E. Palmyra avenue, Orange, California.

O. W. SISSON, 239 S. Glassell, Orange, California.

Orange, Aug. 23, 1930.

Gentlemen:

The tremendous amount of advertising being done by a Mr. Montgomery, who is a candidate for Assessor, costs money. I cannot believe the newspapers are donating all that space. One would think the investigation of conditions this Mr. Montgomery tells about would also cost money, but that he seems to have no investigation.

I have heard it said that when one has very little of a commodity they use it sparingly, and so it seems in the case of this Mr. Montgomery—having so little of the truth he uses it sparingly. But the thing that impresses me most regarding this Mr. Montgomery and his extensive advertising is the fact that in his latest voluminous plea for votes he cites the outrageous way the Birch Oil company is taxed as compared with the so-called light assessments of another company. Now, we all know that our friend A. Otis Birch has fought Mr. Sleeper and Mr. Sleeper's assessments for years, because Birch, poor soul, made so little on that 20 acres in Brea canyon that it hurt Mr. Birch to pay the taxes that Mr. Sleeper felt were fair. This Mr. Montgomery tells us he is fighting for the small tax-payer and then proves it by citing the Birch Oil company that is NOT, but WANTS TO BE a small tax payer. O, well, campaigning costs money.

I, for one, hope this Mr. Montgomery is not elected for if he is, by his own statement, I will have to pay as much tax on the few acres of river bottom land as I do on the improved land I own. He says I shall because he cites the Irvine company over and over, and says it is wrong for the Irvine company not to pay the same rate on its barren hills as the property owners in the vicinity of Fourth and Main streets, Santa Ana, for he compares the taxes, acre against acre, and uses improved and unimproved indiscriminately.

Mr. Sleeper has been a faithful servant of the people of Orange county. Our tax bills are no light things to be handled by half-baked politicians. Experiment if you will with other offices, but since Mr. Sleeper has proved competent, careful, and in every way fitted for his office, let us, by all means, show our appreciation of his work and keep him in the office of County Assessor. Vote for James Sleeper if you want efficiency; vote for the "loud speaker" if you want unsettled tax bills. If the candidate attacking Mr. Sleeper says they won't be unsettled, then why does he promise to change things so drastically?

Performance of duty rather than the "play to the gallery" is needed, and Mr. Sleeper gives us everything we want in a public servant.

MRS. A. D. (DELLA F.) BISHOP.

SMASH—
the County Machine

The ONLY candidate who is regarded by the present county machine as opposed to it is

STUART H. LUCAS

Lucas headed the Water Users' Association, which defeated the nefarious $16,500,000 alleged water conservation and flood control deal, saving the taxpayers' millions.

Lucas thereby became the foe of the County Machine which tried with all their might to saddle on us that enormous burden, to be followed by others of like nature. REMEMBER, if not headed off, the same measure will be before you again as $20,000 has already been included in the county budget for that purpose.

Rancher, financier and civic leader. One of Orange County's most prominent citizens. Known throughout the state for his religious and educational leadership.

County Leader Says Fellow-Townsman Is Qualified for Important Office by Character and Training. "Guarantee of its Sane, Honest and Efficient Direction."

A Letter From Chapman to the Candidate for Sheriff—

"Mr. J. M. Pearson, Fullerton.

Dear Chief:—

It is a pleasure to express my appreciation of your administration of your duties as head of the police department of Fullerton. To have a man of your fine Christian character in a position of such trust and importance is a guarantee of its sane, honest and efficient direction. Especially is this important in this present trend toward lawlessness and disregard even of the great bulwark of our country's fundamental law—our Constitution. The need therefore of faithful law enforcement officers of your type is great.

I am confident that your fine character and your training as a law enforcement officer are a fine background for the new duties to which you aspire, and I feel sure that should you be successful in the election, your record as Sheriff of the great county of Orange will be eminently satisfactory to your constituents.

Wishing you success and with kindest personal regards, I am

Sincerely yours,
CHARLES C. CHAPMAN."

James M. Pearson, of Fullerton

Able and efficient police executive. Candidate for nomination as sheriff. Qualified by character and training for the job. Endorsed by civic leaders and law enforcement organizations.

Where Pearson Stands

"The people of Orange county are entitled to a fair, honorable and efficient administration of the office of sheriff and I will do everything in my power to see they get it. As a police executive in Fullerton I have enforced the law and will continue to do so if elected sheriff. In appointing deputies I shall consider only men of sterling character and proven ability. I cannot be 'fixed' and will not be blinded. I ask the support of all the good citizens of Orange county."

PEARSON CAN WIN

Ministers, civic leaders and enforcement organizations are flocking to the support of Pearson, because they are realizing he is their only candidate who can win next November.

Vote For Pearson For Sheriff

Why You Should Vote for Pearson

He is the enforcement candidate who can be elected next fall. He is vitally interested in creating respect for law and building up protecting moral ramparts for the youth of the county. He is an able police administrative officer — fearless, honest, trained in modern methods of combatting lawlessness. He will not tolerate men on his force not in harmony with his own high principles. His past life, ability and experience qualify him for the office.

HEAD, IN KREG SPEECH, BACKS JIM SLEEPER

The following address was delivered over KREG last night by H. C. Head, speaking on behalf of James Sleeper, county assessor, who is seeking re-election:

"Orange county will elect an assessor next Tuesday, for there are only two candidates for that office and the one who receives the most votes at the primary election will be elected. To the property owner, the office of assessor is the most important one in the county. Not that the assessor fixes or determines the amount of taxes to be paid, for he has nothing to do with that. The amount of taxes depends on the amount of money that must be raised to meet county, city and district expenses, and the assessor has no control over those expenses. The necessary amount of money must be raised whether the assessed valuation of property be great or small.

"The assessor does assess the valuation of the taxable property in the county, and that valuation, multiplied by the tax rate which is fixed by the board of supervisors, determines the amount of taxes to be paid by the property owner. Therefore, if property of equal value is assessed the same, the assessment is fair and each owner pays his just share of taxes; but if two pieces of property are of equal value, and one of them is assessed higher than the other, then one owner is required to pay more than his share of taxes. For that reason it is important to the property owner that the county assessor be honest, experienced and competent.

"The office of assessor is not only of great importance; it is also the biggest in volume of business and the most difficult to properly fill, of all the county offices. The total assessed valuation of property in Orange county is approximately one hundred and eighty million dollars; there are one hundred and forty thousand parcels of real estate assessed, more than thirty-seven thousand buildings, more than fifty thousand automobiles, millions of dollars worth of oil property, and personal property of all kinds to be assessed, and the assessments must be property entered in the assessment rolls. The assessor must properly supervise all this work and see that it is efficiently, justly and properly done. It requires a man of exceptional qualification, experience, knowledge of the county and executive ability to properly and satisfactorily fill the office of assessor of Orange county.

"It has been my privilege to be personally acquainted with every assessor who has served in Orange county. They have all been honest and capable. But, about twenty years ago we were fortunate in having selected for that office a pioneer resident of the county, James Sleeper, who proved so especially well qualified for the job that we have kept him at it ever since. In fact, Jim Sleeper is not only the best assessor Orange county ever had, but he is recognized and known throughout the state as one of the most competent assessors in the State of California. Soon after entering the office he originated a method of assessing oil properties which for the first time won a just and systematic mode of valuing such property and procuring a fair amount of taxes from oil producers. That system has been approved and held legal by the supreme court of California, and it has been copied and adopted by the assessor of every county in this state having oil property to assess. Also the state tax commissions from Colorado, Wyoming and Texas, and assessors from Oklahoma have obtained information from him so as to enable them to adopt his method of oil property assessment.

"Mr. Sleeper has established a system of assessing buildings which has proved so fair and equitable that it has been adopted by the assessors of Los Angeles, San Bernardino and Riverside counties. For the same reason his method of assessing fruit trees has been adopted by San Bernardino and Riverside counties. His office is considered a model one and his aid and advice have been sought by assessors from many counties.

"Jim Sleeper was the first assessor of Orange county to make the bit land owners and the big oil producers pay their just share of taxes. It took great courage and ability and absolute honesty for him to do it, for those big fellows did hate to pay, and some of them fought him clear to the supreme court, but Sleeper' fairness and honesty prevailed. Incidentally, in connection with some of that litigation the assessment of the Birch oil property in comparison with that against the Union Oil company was thoroughly gone into by the courts, and Mr. Sleeper's assessments sustained as fair and equitable. In fact the criticisms which his opponents have indulged in during this campaign, when exposed to the light of truth are found to be based on mistake of fact or deliberate falsehood, and so they fade away and leave James Sleeper bigger and stronger than ever in public esteem.

"His opponent has not lived very long among us. He is no doubt a very estimable citizen, but we do not know what kind of an assessor he would make as we have not tried him in that capacity. We have tried Jim Sleeper and we know that he is the ablest assessor Orange county has ever had and one of the best in California; one whose first class ability is recognized beyond the boundaries of California. We know him to be honest, that no amount of money would even tempt him to do a wrong or crooked thing. We know that he is fearless, that neither threats, nor abuse nor opposition can swerve im from impartial performance of his duty. We know that he is courteous, fair and just. When that kind of a man is willing to work for us, my fellow citizens, we will be foolish, indeed, if we do not keep him on the job."

LUTZ ELECTION CHANCES GOOD, BACKERS CLAIM

Friends of B. Frank Lutz, sergeant of police, who is running for constable of the Santa Ana township, today were most optimistic over his chances for victory in the Tuesday elections.

A Santa Ana police officer for the past eight years, an old army man with experience in the Spanish-American war and the World war, Lutz, who has been a resident of Santa Ana for the past 35 years, is particularly well known here. He is a member of the Santa Ana post of the American Legion, of the Calumpit camp, of the Spanish-American War veterans, and also a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars here. He also is a member of the Santa Ana lodge of Masons.

A police officer of wide experience and ability, boosters of Lutz point him out as one of the best qualified men in the race and are unanimous in their opinion that the people of Santa Ana will recognize ability and integrity when they cast their votes Tuesday.

One Car Found; Another Stolen

One automobile reported stolen on August 21, was recovered, and theft of another was reported last night, according to police records.

The car owned by James H. Sewell, of 806 South Sycamore street, reported stolen Thursday night, was found last night abandoned at Fourth and Lacy streets.

P. E. Bakenhur, of Santa Ana, Route No. 1, reported the theft of his car last night from near Fifth street and Broadway.

Owls have four toes on each foot.

—for Constable

Selection of a constable for Santa Ana township is worth study. The post has varied and exacting requirements, not only because this is a populous township, with heavy civil court work, but also because it is close to the hub of law enforcement activities, of the entire county.

My record shows that I have been vigilant in law enforcement, always cooperating with the sheriff and police to run down crime. I even have gone beyond the line of my duty to do this. I believe in strict enforcement of the liquor laws, as well as all other laws.

Your support at the polls next Tuesday will be appreciated and likewise will be your approval of my services in the past.

For continued law enforcement, re-elect—

MITCHELL ASKS FOR SUPPORT ON RECORD AS COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS

Next Tuesday, August 26, the voters of Orange County will be called upon to elect a county superintendent of schools. Charged with the education of the children of the county—the county's most valuable asset—it follows that the county superintendent's office is one of the most important in the county service. The welfare of each and every child in the public schools depend in a measure upon the proper and efficient administration of the school system.

In asking for support of my candidacy for re-election to my present office, I invite attention to the record of my administration, which speaks for itself. Under my direction, the superintendent's office has been a clearing house for all questions pertaining to the affairs of the various school districts.

Not only have I endeavored to render efficient and courteous service, but it has been my desire to co-operate with the trustees of the various school trustees in every possible way. My familiarity with the social and economic conditions of each and every school dstrict has rendered this co-operation doubly valuable to all concerned. Moreover, I have extended similar co-operation to the Parent-Teachers Associations, the Crippled Childrens' Relief Association, and to all other organizations devoted to child welfare.

R. P. MITCHELL,

County Superintendent of Schools.

A PLAIN STATEMENT OF FACTS

County Auditor Jerome

On Tuesday, August 26th, the citizens of Orange County will be deciding a very serious business question. They will be electing officials of the biggest business in the County. They will be selecting the men and women who will handle, for four long years, the intimate details of a corporation whose income last year was over ten millions of dollars, the proper administration of which will very vitally concern every man, woman and child in the county.

It is not a matter to be settled lightly or where passion, sympathy, prejudice or likes and dislikes should have a part.

It should call for cool thinking, sound judgment and careful consideration, for on the outcome depends much of the prosperity, happiness and well-being of the County. This, I am saying to you as a citizen and taxpayer.

The citizens of Orange County have nearly always chosen wisely in the past, and to this fact is largely due the splendid reputation this County has always had in this State. It has been looked up to as a model of clean, well managed government, where any citizen who desires can have an exact accounting of every penny spent and received and where no evidence of graft has ever been found.

The County Auditor's office, of which you elected me the head sixteen years ago, is the clearing house for all the financial transactions of the County. Not one penny enters the Treasury without our order and no money for any purpose is spent except on our approval as to legality, and the Treasurer and Auditor and their bondsmen are responsible for any illegal expenditures. We are not responsible for the wisdom of the expenditure, but we are for the legality. This puts us in the position occasionally of withholding approval of expenditures that some people think are proper, and subjects us to unjust criticism.

THROUGH ALL THESE YEARS NO GRAND JURY, COURT, OR EXPERT HAS EVER CAUSED US TO CHANGE A FIGURE IN YOUR ACCOUNTS.

It is a record of which we are proud and we submit it to you for your consideration. The duties of the auditor's office are probaby as little understood by the average citizen as any office in the Courthouse. By many it is looked upon only as a bookkeeping office, when the facts are that this is only one of many functions. The tax department alone requiring more deputies than the bookkeeping.

Our heaviest and most exacting duties come in the months of July, August and September, and due to this fact the Auditor has little time to spend campaigning for reelection.

We have tried to serve you well, I believe we have, I have no new promises to make. What we have done in the past, we will try to do better in the future. We deeply appreciate the fine friendly support we have had in the past, and hope to be considered favorably next Tuesday.

SAYS OUTBOARD MOTORS TO BE SPEEDIER SOON

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—That outboard motors will reach 60 miles per hour or better before the end of the year was the prediction of J. E. Wilkinson, winner of the famous Albany to New York outboard marathon, April 26, last, and who holds a prominent place in the power boating world.

"I confidently expect to see outboard motors breaking 60 miles per hour before the year is out," declared Wilkinson.

Wilkinson based this prediction on the performance of his own motor and boat in winning the gruelling 133-mile dash down the Hudson.

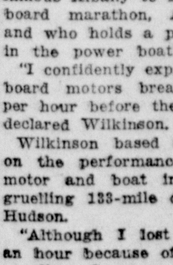

"Although I lost at least half an hour because of water in my gasoline, I averaged 38.5 miles per hour, and broke last year's record by 11 minute and 37 seconds. Although my sea horse motor rans wide open, 5800 r. p. m., for the entire trip, it was in as good condition when I finished as when I started in Albany. There is no question but that under more favorable condition, motors of this type can reach a speed of 60 miles per hour."

Wilkinson, who has gained considerable prominence as a marine engineer, believes that the phenomenal increase in speed in outboard motors in the past few years was due primarily to the development of the pressure vacuum cooling system on the motor. In this system water is automatically driven into an opening behind the propellor, forced up through the powerhead of the motor, and brought out again at a point directly in front of the propellor.

The present outboard speed record was set last December by H. G. Ferguson in California in his sea horse powered craft at 49.48 miles per hour.

UBLIC FLOCKS O GOLF CLUB N STATE ROAD

e Orange County miniature club, without doubt the most rate in the county, was n open to the public last g with several hundred tees of the sport taking advan- of the occasion.

e new course, located on the highway, halfway between eim and Santa Ana, was of- ly opened at 6 o'clock when representatives of the daily newspapers of the county took issue with the members of the board of supervisors on the greens and emerged victorious.

Willard Smith, chairman of the board of supervisors, was the first to tee off and ran into plenty of trouble before he had negotiated the 18 holes. Smith refused to turn in his score, claiming it looked like the sum total of election returns instead of a golf score.

The new course represents an investment of more than $30,000 and is jointly owned and operated by George J. Rowe and L. R. Bawker.

Located on the main artery between San Diego and Los Angeles, the new miniature course is a work of art. It is situated in a grove of Walnut trees and is a real test of putting. The fairways are wider than on the average miniature course and the greens are larger. Trick holes have given way to ones where accuracy in putting are necessary.

According to the owners the course, being outside the city limits, will be open 24 hours a day.

NAVY TO STORE EXPLOSIVES IN NEVADA DESERT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Uncle Sam is building his newest naval station in the middle of a desert.

A $3,500,000 affair, it is rearing itself out in western Nevada on the sand plains. After September 30, when it is completed, this new station will house thousands of pounds of high explosives, far from civilization. When completed, the giant storehouse will form one of safest ammunition depots in the world, engineers estimated.

The depot will form a little city all by itself, isolated in the desert, but with a lake nearby for swimming and boating and all uses which a small contingent of naval officers stationed at the post desire. Its nearest civilized neighbor will be Reno, Nevada, 150 miles away.

In spite of its isolation, however, the little city, to be known as the Naval Ammunition Depot, Hawthorne, Nevada, is but five and a half miles from a single railway spur, thus making possible communication with and transportation to and from the outside world a matter of comparative ease.

When completed, the station will look like a wide expanse of sand dotted with half buried, giant eggs, the tops or domes of sunken ammunition magazines.

Due to the high explosive quality of the ammunition to be stored, the magazines will be built in separate plots, in groups of seven. Explosion of one group, engineers estimate, will not cause detonation of others because of this separation.

The new project came into being as a result of an effort to minimize danger to civilized communities from explosion of high explosives. The Lake Denmark, N. J. explosion in July, 1926, with its accompanying destruction and loss of life emphasized anew the necessity of isolating ammunition depots, and in spite of the discomforts to personnel involved, it was decided to locate a depot for the storing of surplus explosives left over from the war at such a spot as was chosen in Nevada.

The new depot was designed to serve the Pacific coast, and its site was chosen after naval experts inspected sites in California, Utah and Nevada and recommended the location finally used.

Rainfall averages less than three inches a year at the Hawthorne site of the new depot. Soil is well drained, and firm, and the sand and gravel supply was found to be ample.

A busy mining center used to be located near what is now the new naval reservation, but now has become virtually deserted.

The depot project involved construction of 145 permanent buildings, a laundry central heating and boiler plant, administration buildings, residences and barracks.

An auditorium was provided for recreational purposes, a school will be built, and repair shops, storehouse, fire station, and a refrigerating plant.

FICTION FACT

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Sir Bruce Burce-Porter, physician, in commenting on the influence of fiction, tells this story. He had a patient extremely ill who was reading a fiction story in which the heroine was extremely ill. As the story progressed the heroine got better—and so did his patient. Sir Bruce had written to the novelist and asked him to write his installments in such a way that the heroine recovered. The story influenced his patient"s recovery, he says.

Real love is full of understanding.

FIND LOVE NOT CHIEF REASON FOR WEDDINGS

GREELEY, Colo., Aug. 23.—No matter what the poets say, love is not the chief cause of wedding bells. Only ten of ninety-nine students in sociology would wed for love.

Those are the conclusions drawn from replies by the sociology class of Prof. W. G. Binnewein at Colorado State Teachers' College here.

Asked "Why Marry?" in a class devoted to study of the modern family, students gave the following answers.

"For companionship," said thirty-five.

"For a home," said thirty.

"For children," answered twenty-four.

Two girls were tired of earning their own living.

One said it was the natural thing to do; it is the usual custom, said another. A third desired the different status enjoyed by married women, and a fourth girl wanted someone "to take care" of her.

The seven students who voted against marriage numbered only eleven reasons. They gave various answers, such as a desire to finish school, to escape "in-laws," to enjoy life, and an unwillingness to give up independence.

Forty-nine students favored marriage, seven opposed it. The nine married students, explaining why they married, gave the following reasons: Desire for companionship, love, for a home, for children, "join the crowd," greater stability.

LEO PORTER IN A STRONG RACE

Training and Qualifications Fit Him For Office of Sheriff. Election at Primary August 26, Is Assured, Say Backers

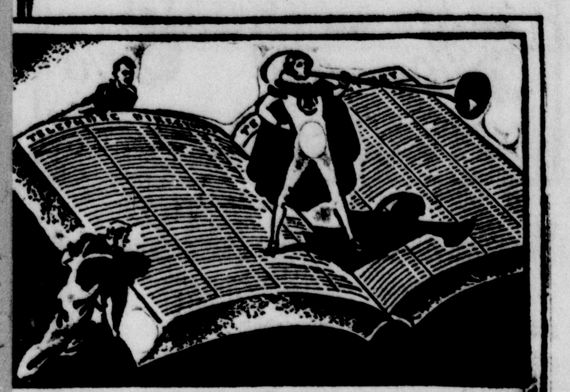

The candidacy of Leo Porter, in the race for Sheriff at the primary, is gaining momentum every day. Porter has pledged himself to a businesslike administration and to the fair and impartial enforcement of all laws.

Porter has a host of friends over the entire county and those who are watching closely the political trend freely predict that his election is practically assured. They point to his record in private life as well as his dealing with the public to prove that he possesses the qualifications necessary to carry out his campaign pledges to the letter. He is known everywhere for the fairness with which he treats everyone with whom he comes in contact.

Porter is a World War Veteran and does not know the meaning of fear. He refuses to recognize crime of any kind and can be depended upon to wage a relentless fight on every kind of lawlessness. Best of all he can be depended upon to do this fairly and impartially without fear or favor.

In entering the race for this important office Porter comes in uncontrolled by a group or individual. His record is clean and he can at once start his organization in the field to stamp out the violation of law, without dictation. He will at all times seek advice on the best methods to use but will refuse to swerve an inch from what he believes is his duty to the people of Orange County.

In supporting, by their ballot, Leo Porter at the primary August 26, voters will be behind a man who is young and vigorous, who will go into the Sheriff's office with the grim determination to overcome all obstacles and to give the county a safe, sane and businesslike administration.

My Dear Dr. Warmer:—

It is a pleasure to write this word of introduction and commendation for Mr. Harry C. Westover who is now an attorney-at-law in Santa Ana. During the years of my presidency at the University of Arizona Mr. Westover was a student in both Liberal Arts and Law. Throughout his course he maintained a high grade of scholarship and manifested that interest and zeal in his work which commended him both to faculty and students alike. Mr. Westover comes of a family of public spirit and unselfish service in the affairs of the State, and is indefatigable in his attention to any responsibilities which he may undertake. He is a young man of sterling qualities of character and possesses the qualities of substantial friendship. I am sure that he will discharge faithfully any duties which may be entrusted to him.

With personal regards, I am,

Faithfully yours,
R. B. von KLEINSMID,
President.

Westover Stands For and Promises:

To divorce that office from control of the political bosses.

I promise there will be no suppression of evidence in criminal matters.

Actual and real enforcement of the 18th Amendment and all other laws, and prosecution in any case the facts warrant.

That so far as lies in my power the strangle hold of any political machine upon Orange County shall be loosened.

That there shall be no underhand or secret methods of conduct in the district attorney's office.

To be a conscientious servant of all the people and of no political group.

OFFICE SEEKERS AT REALTORS' MEETING

A general good will gathering of candidates was held yesterday noon when 22 men seeking office were guests of the Santa Ana Realty board at Ketner's cafe.

The different candidates introduced each other and made a few remarks. Billy Martin acted as chairman of the meeting. Herb Alleman, president of the Realty board, made an announcement concerning the organizing of a property owners' division of the Realty board. Dues for this division would be much smaller than in the other division, $5.00 being the total amount paid during the year. These two divisions could work together in bringing about even distribution of property taxes, the president explained.

The candidates that were present were R. E. Haynes, James Sleeper, George Montgomery, J. M. Pearson, Dave Wettlin, Ray Adkinson, C. J. Roehm, Harry Westover, Mrs. Belle Spangler, Bill Sylvester, John Lamb, R. P. Mitchell, Earl Abbey, Sam Jernigan, Logan Jackson, W. T. Lambert, W. K. Hillyard, Ralph McFadden, Bert E. Dawson, Vernon Barnhill, J. G. Berneike, W. G. Knox.

Pronouncement Of Judgment Deferred

Pronouncement of sentence on two men and a woman, which was scheduled to take place in superior court yesterday, by Judge J. L. Allen, was postponed when the prisoners all entered applications for probation.

The men, Jesus Galban and Panfilo Diaz, had been found guilty by a jury on a charge of owning and operating a still. The woman, Sarah Sekarich, had entered a plea of guilty before the court on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Hearings were set for August 29.

ACCIDENT VERDICT RETURNED BY JURY

FELLERTON, Aug. 23.—That the death of T. T. Turner, who was fatally injured when struck by a car driven by J. B. Hurt, of San Jacinto, Thursday, was accidental, was the verdict of a coroner's jury yesterday afternoon in the McAulay and Suters funeral parlors.

Hurt reported to local police that his car struck Turner, who was walking west on Orangethorpe avenue when he attempted to pass a truck which turned out and forced Hurt's car so far to the side of the road that he struck Turner. The truck did not stop and the driver was not found, according to reports.

Turner who resided on his orange grove, is survived by his wife, Mary; one son, Leroy, and a daughter, Florence, all of whom live at home; three brothers, William, of Fullerton, and Steve L. and James Y. Turner, of Los Angeles.

Editor of The Register:
Dear sir:

At a meeting of the East Santa Ana Improvement association held Thursday evening, August 7th, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Be it Resolved: That we urge upon the State Highway commission, the Board of County Supervisors, and the City Trustees of Orange and Santa Ana, the advisability and need of the proposed extension of South Glassell street in Orange, to connect up with Grand avenue, Santa Ana, in as direct line as possible and to continue same down McClay street and intersect with Newport boulevard, as we believe this the most feasible and direct route for the secondary highway from San Bernardino to Newport Beach, and incidentally will supply a much needed direct road for inter-city traffic between Orange and Santa Ana.

RUSSELL CALDWELL,
Secretary.

Editor of The Register:
Dear sir:

This communication is being sent simultaneously to the official bodies named in the resolution above, with the hope it will receive favorable consideration and assure you our organization stands ready to assist in any way that is proper.

Very respectfully,
East Santa Ana Improvement Ass'n,
By J. H. STOUT,
President.

Editor of The Register:
Dear sir:

The following is a copy of a letter addressed to the board of supervisors:

Gentlemen:

The Associated Property Owners hereby go on record as favoring the extension of South Glassell street, Orange, south to connect directly with Grand avenue, Santa Ana, at the earliest possible moment consistent with fairness to adjacent property interests.

Yours very truly,
Associated Property Owners,
By J. C. METZGAR,
Secretary-Manager.

Editor, Register:

Enclosed please find a clipping from the Register of August 20th. I will not assume that you approve of the manner in which your reporter couples my name with that of one of the candidates for sheriff, Mr. McCardia.

I am a candidate for public administrator and coroner, on the ground that absolute honesty as well as conscientiousness in the appointment of his attorney in estate cases is a prerequisite to doing justice in the administration of estates that pass through his hands.

My old friends in Orange county value me as a man of honesty and conscientiousness.

In my campaign I am striking at the rottenness which I found in the probate court, and of which I became the innocent victim. My effort to expose it may be feeble, but I am making it for the good of the public rather than of myself. It finds the approval of Christian men and women.

That I am bold enough to attack judicial and administrative rottenness can rest only on the fact that I can furnish the proof of what I say.

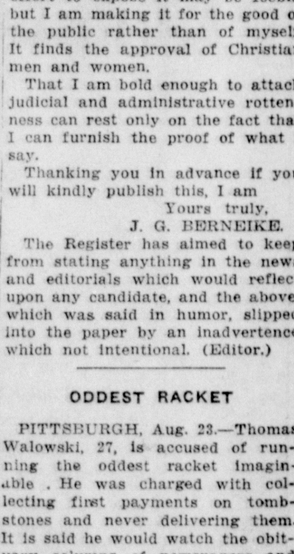

Thanking you in advance if you will kindly publish this, I am

Yours truly,
J. G. BERNEIKE.

The Register has aimed to keep from stating anything in the news and editorials which would reflect upon any candidate, and the above, which was said in humor, slipped into the paper by an inadvertence which not intentional. (Editor.)

Peoples League of Orange County Makes Endorsements for Candidates for Orange County

The Peoples League of Orange county has been spending a great deal of its time in investigating the political situation and the availability of candidates for the various offices in the county, and here is presented its recommendations.

Because of the general tendency toward machine politics it has felt that there should be a complete change in the office holders of the county. We have believed it would make for better government. It would give a check-up on offices that have not been checked on for a quarter of a century. It would break a certain power of organized politics in the county which needs breaking. It would tend to free the people and give them liberty to do and become which they have not now.

We have found one office, however, the office of assessor, where we would recommend that the present incumbent be retained. We do this for the same reasons that we recommend changes in other offices. We find that a political group is opposing the present assessor. It appears to us that they are doing this largely because he will not do the will of the political ring, but is independent in his activities. He is thoroughly trained, and efficient, and the man whom these politicians would propose to put in his place is a man without experience, and we would judge according to statements made through his advertising that he knows nothing of values or how values are determined, and it would be a most dangerous thing to substitute such a stranger for a man so well tried.

WE ARE PUTTING CROSSES OPPOSITE THOSE FOR WHOM WE MAKE RECOMMENDATIONS. We are not making any recommendations on the state ticket.

Where there are a number of candidates, any one of whom we might recommend, we are making a cross in front of the one whom we believe has the best show of nomination as against the machine candidate or candidates.

You will vote for but one supervisor, but we are making this ballot so as to give suggestions in regard to each district. In regard to the supervisor contest in the fifth district, there are four candidates whom we believe represent the sentiment of the people as against the ring. These four are: Eugene Fenelon, Charles O. Artz, J. W. Sauers and Stuart Lucas. We believe there is need of unity in order to be sure of nominating one of these, and while it is believed that S. H. Lucas is the strongest of the four in point of votes, it is possible we are mistaken and one of the others is stronger in the judgment of the voters; so vote for any of these men.

Argument

The man in office has just one argument to present to the voters for keeping him there. That argument is that he has made good on the job. If he lacks that argument he has no earthly excuse for asking re-election. However—

IF THE MAN IN OFFICE HAS MADE GOOD ON THE JOB, THEN NO ONE CAN ADVANCE A FAIR OR LOGICAL REASON FOR TAKING HIS JOB AWAY FROM HIM AND GIVING IT TO SOME ONE ELSE WHO MIGHT MAKE GOOD—OR MIGHT MAKE A MESS OF AFFAIRS.

The longer a man continues to make good on the job, the more claim he has for holding it—the better fitted he is for the job—and the more certain of his loyalty and ability the public can be. That makes sense.

J. C. JOPLIN

Because J. C. Joplin has been making good on his job as county treasurer for 30 years—has demonstrated his efficiency and loyalty over a long period—has gained experience and training that are priceless assets to the county—he should be kept in office for the valuable service he can render to you, the taxpayers.

AND WHEN SOME CANDIDATE TELLS YOU THAT JOPLIN HAS BEEN ON THE JOB TOO LONG AND SHOULD BE REMOVED YOU MAY KNOW THAT HE IS NOT LOOKING OUT FOR YOUR INTERESTS, BUT IS LOOKING OUT FOR HIS OWN.

That candidate is concerned not with public service, but with private and personal advantage. Else he would not grasp at the straw of such a shallow excuse, for he knows it will not stand the test of common reasoning.

THE PRIMARY ELECTION NEXT TUESDAY WILL BE A SIGNIFICANT TEST OF VOTING INTELLIGENCE FOR ORANGE COUNTY TAXPAYERS. IT WILL SHOW WHETHER EFFICIENCY AND FAITHFUL PERFORMANCE OF DUTY ARE AN ASSET OR A LIABILITY. IT WILL TELL WHETHER IT PAYS A PUBLIC SERVANT TO BE TRUE TO HIS TRUST.

We, the friends of J. C. Joplin, who are responsible for this final word to the voters, believe that his conscientious service will be sustained and approved at the polls by the intelligent and fair-dealing element of our population. All citizens who know J. C. Joplin and are familiar with his typically pioneer character—ruggedly honest and plain-spoken—know of course the secret of his successful career, never marred by defeat. He always has held their confidence and respect. He still holds it, justly.

WE FEEL, AND BELIEVE, THAT YOU WILL AGREE WITH US, THAT A VOTE AGAINST SUCH AN OFFICIAL AS J. C. JOPLIN WOULD BE A BLOW AT RIGHT GOVERNMENT AND A SETBACK FOR PUBLIC SERVICE. IT IS MOST EMPHATICALLY TRUE THAT—if loyalty and ability in public service are worth anything—

—they are worth keeping

WRIGHT TO BE IN CHARGE OF FAIR DISPLAY

Orange county's exhibit at the state fair, which opens August 30 at Sacramento, will be in charge of Deputy Agricultural Commissioner W. H. Wright and will feature a bridge tower in Venice. Citrus fruits as well as other Orange county products will be used extensively in the display.

The tower is to be six feet square at the base and 20 feet in height, including a figure at the top. A canal will be represented with a miniature gondola and a gondolier heading for a likeness of Balboa bay. Beneath an arch directly back of the bay scene will be a back drop painted to show the rolling Orange county hills covered with orange groves and oil wells.

Another scene depicting a Venetian view will appear under another archway, before which will be a campanile built of jars of honey. The tower will be covered with blue and gold foil.

Wright will leave tomorrow for Sacramento to supervise the installation of the Orange county exhibit. The same exhibit is to be displayed at the Los Angeles county fair. Orange county displays have won numerous prizes at these fairs in the past and it is anticipated that a goodly share of the honors will be attracted again this year.

IMPROVEMENTS AT DANA POINT RUSHED

DANA POINT, Aug. 23.—Speeding up the development program, the Dana Point syndicate will start the building of nine new homes, eight miles of street, paving and curbing and the laying of gas mains north of the highway about September 1. In an agreement with the Southern Counties Gas company, the syndicate was to put in the lines north of the highway if the gas company would pipe south of the highway. The gas company has practically completed its work and is giving service to many homes. Both the Motor inn and Dana Point hotel are now working full crews and crowding the construction.

Two life guards have been kept at the strand all summer and have saved the lives of five people who got beyond their depth. These guards are paid by the Dana Point syndicate. The men are from U. S. C. and U. C. L. A.

John Lyle, company manager at Dana Point, had this to say regarding the agitation against the company closing the beach: "Our company feels its obligation not only to the people who have bought our property, but to all Orange county, and to the tourists who come our way. Our aim is to keep the beaches clean and up to a high moral standard as well as to protect the lives of and property of all who visit the beach. We consider that 100 bathers is about all that two guards can properly handle and when we have that number we close the gates for awhile until the crowds begins to thin out, then take on another bunch."

CITRUS PRODUCTS CONCERN IS SUED

Difficulties of a citrus fruit products company, of Stanton, were again in court today following filing of two suits yesteray by D. C. Reinhardt. The Orange and Lemon Products company was named defendant in one action and J. F. Robison, et al, were defendants in the other.

Reinhardt is suing the Orange and Lemon Products company for $556.28, which he alleges is due and unpaid for services and mileage. He claims that he was employed as general manager of the firm commencing April 1, for which he said he was to receive compensation at the rate of $250 per month, and mileage for use of his car, that he severed connections with the company on June 1, but never had been paid.

In the other complaint directed against Robinson, he asks judgment for $2000, which it is alleged he advanced for stocks that has never been delivered, and cancellation of a note for $3500 which he signed and for which he said he received no consideration.

RE-ELECT
CHARLES D. BROWN
(INCUMBENT)
Coroner and Public Administrator
OF ORANGE COUNTY
Primary Election August 26, 1930

Bert E. Dawson
for Constable Says:

Whether or not you believe in strict law enforcement you will have to agree at this time as never before in the history of our county that we face a condition that threatens our very existence—our liberties, our future prosperity and happiness.

It needs a concerted effort on the part of every officer of the law to stem this great crime wave sweeping the country, undermining our American business, undermining our American homes and shattering our American ideals and principles.

Without making a single personal recommendation, I implore you to be extremely careful of deceitful political influences and cast your vote for those known to be loyal to their trusts and equal to the tasks imposed upon the various offices, and possessing backbone enough to stand for that which is right and just.

SPANISH VILLAGE DEPOT SITE CHOSEN

SAN CLEMENTE, Aug. 23.—The city council has been informed that the Santa Fe depot site in San Clemente has been approved by the railroad commission. State engineers visited the Spanish village and after a survey decided on the site just opposite the Beach club.

At the council session the mayor was delegated to take up with the railroad commission the question of the removal of telegraph poles from streets and lots where such poles were an obstruction to construction. The telephone company has complied with the city's request but the cable company has made an issue of the matter, it was claimed.

A resolution of regret over the fact that financial policy caused the city to dispense with Chief of Police L. A. Warren's services was adopted. The city lauded the chief's ability, efficiency and service and commended him for his work in San Clemente.

CAPISTRANO BEACH GETS GOLF COURSE

CAPISTRANO BEACH, Aug. 23.—This village by the sea is not to be outdone by even the big cities, and will have a grand opening of its Ace of Clubs golf course tonight. Trigg Landreth is the owner of the new 18-hole golf course located on the highway just a few blocks from the ocean. The fairways have been covered with felt and many interesting hazards have been introduced. Par has been set at 41. The San Clemente band has been engaged for the opening.

Corrects Score In Milk Contest

Dr. K. H. Sutherland, county health officer, today issued a statement carrying a correction of a figure in the Orange county milk scoring contest as revised by the state bureau of dairy control. An error was made in the scoring of Grade A raw milk of the Wilson dairy, according to a communication to Dr. Sutherland from R. P. Gingerich, market milk specialist of the state bureau, and the score should have been 95 to 100 instead of 90 to 95 as previously reported and published.

Capistrano Road Work Under Way

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO, Aug. 23.—The Hollywood Paving company has completed establishing a plant one mile from town on the property of the South Coast Rock company. The plant will furnish hot material for the eight miles of paving to be put in at Dana Point.

The county road crew has unloaded material and equipment to start grading and surfacing with gravel and tar. Broadway, Commercial, Main, Cross and Occidental streets will get the work.

GOOD HEAVENS!

PALM BEACH, Fla., Aug. 23.—A recent business transaction in Florida should have had a minister at the head of it. For C. P. Corrigan, for $2.80, received for unpaid taxes the "Celestial Line," a railroad operating over eight miles and connecting the Florida towns of Jupiter, Venus, Mars and Juno.

LAMBERT

W. T. LAMBERT

If it is hazardous to the interests of a county to elect new officers who will unseat those who have held the office for upwards of sixteen years, why have elections at all? Why not give to these men a life-tenancy to the office? The founders of our country didn't agree with this theory; they viewed with alarm the hazard of permitting men to remain in office too long—reasoning that it invited arrogancy and neglect, so they provided for elections.

It is silly to argue that because a certain officer has held an office for sixteen years or longer that he is the only one fitted for it, and should be retained indefinitely. After a reasonable length of time the substitution of an honest and efficient man or woman for every office is a good, wholesome thing for a county, state or nation, and that is one of the reasons why we are asking you to ELECT W. T. LAMBERT TO THE OFFICE OF COUNTY AUDITOR NEXT TUESDAY. Nineteen years' experience in newspaper work and AUDITING—an expert book-keeper; six years CASHIER AND MANAGER of country banks — a CLEAN, ABLE and EXPERIENCED MAN who will give his entire time to his duties if elected. VOTE FOR HIM.

JAMES SLEEPER
- COUNTY ASSESSOR -
Answers the Viscious Attack Made by the Following
Would-Be Bosses Of Orange County

C. C. SIDNAM, Anaheim; HOWARD IRWIN, Fullerton; ROSS SHAFER, Tustin; J. A. KNAPP, Garden Grove, HARRY BECKER, Brea; LOTUS H. LOUDON, Anaheim, and WILLIAM SCHUMACHER, Buena Park.

GENTLEMEN:

I notice by your advertising that you have set yourselves up as the county's greatest experts on the values of Orange county property. You talk about $75,000,000 and $100,000,000 like most of us taxpayers talk about 15 cents. You are attempting to make the people believe and you have told that the Irvine ranch was worth $75,000,000. There are 68,000 acres of this ranch, which you know is composed of hill, mountain and brush land, with only 35,000 acres of level land.

The value placed by your people as the appraisers this county would make every acre of this land worth $760. You know, if you know anything about property, that you can buy some of the best water-stock land in the county for some $1500 to $2000 per acre. Why then do you put 68,000 acres of that kind of land down at $760 per acre?

You desire to compare the O'Neill ranch, composed of mountains, hills and canyons and no ocean frontage in this county, with our finest orchard land. You are doing this unquestionably to arouse prejudice, for you know if you know anything about values that there is no grounds for such claim. You speak of the great acreage of this land. Listen. Let me say a word to you about values.

The southwest corner block at Main and 4th street in Santa Ana, in which is located the First National Bank with its improvements, is worth more than the 65,000 acres of the O'Neill ranch, and if you know anything about values at all, you would be comparing that ranch with 65,000 acres without people with other land that is populous and improved. Upon that 65,000 acres it takes 20 acres to maintain a cow for a year.

And now you would-be bosses and assessors of the county say that the Union Oil Company's holdings are worth $75,000,000. Let's see if they are. Did you know that the Murphy Oil Company sold 2240 acres of oil land with flowing wells on same, lying in the hills west of Fullerton just a few years ago to the Standard Oil Company for $6,000,000 and 20 per cent royalty?. And that the vice-president of the company stating at that time that it was the best piece of oil property in Orange county? Now where do you get the $75,000,000 you were talking about? You say the Union Oil Company has 1500 acres of proven oil land. You are either misinformed or telling untruths, for as a matter of fact they have but 600 acres of proven oil land, less than half the amount which you state. Go and look at the Brea refinery and see if you can find $10,000,000 of property there.

You also tell about 3,000 acres of land, mostly citrus. You did not tell that these trees on this land were not of assessable age.

Why did you not give these facts if you did not want to deceive the voters? And further, why did you not say that Gaston Bastanchury has a sale lease with the option of buying on all the citrus land at a very low price, which you may know and have concealed, but in any case can be substantiated by speaking to him.

Now about the Birch Oil company which for some reason you seem to feel so sorry for. The Birch Oil Company sued me over their assessment for six consecutive years, and I won each case in the superior courts of this county. So in attempting to find fault with me on this ground you are rather finding fault with the courts. This has been declared to be the greatest piece of oil property for its size—20 acres—ever known, it having produced over 8,000,000 barrels in the past 23 years and still producing at the rate of 400,000 barrels per year now.

You know I put up the price on the Irvine property and that I had a contest before your Board of Equalization of which one of you is a member and it was only by a substantiation of the fair values which were established that I was able to make my contention. And now you would have it appear that rather than my raising the valuations, I was favoring them.

You know better, and you are doing this to create prejudice. And as a matter of fact you conceal from the people the fact that the Irvine company which you desire to have them think that I am favoring, actually backed a candidate against me in a campaign because of the established values I had placed on their property.

You would have the voters believe that the candidate whom you have selected, and urged to run, with his experience chiefly that of compiling telephone directories in Los Angeles county, which work he did for 15 years, and not holding any executive office in the concern, qualifies him for a knowledge of real estate and other property values in Orange county. You know better.

I am sure that if the voters of this county desire to make a change that they would not select a hand-picked, boss-controlled man of inexperience, the campaign for whom is conducted in prejudice and the arousing of class hatred.

I have endeavored to give courteous and efficient service. I have been assured by thousands of people in the county that I have in a measure succeeded. I have fought for the interests of the county and have come up against the big financial institutions of the county and you know it.

And you are attempting to use the very ones whose taxes I have increased, and who have at times been against me, to arouse the people against me now. I have made them pay their part of the taxes of their county, and they are doing it.

I do not believe that with all your misstatements of facts and appeal to prejudice that the voters of the county will vote for an assessor without experience and comparatively unknown by the people of this county.

The people of the county are against boss-rule and they know now that the real reason why you are stating falsehoods and half-truths to arouse prejudice. You are doing it because I am not bossed by you or any other men. I know that my record is such that I can trust the people of this county, and I would not have had to make even a campaign if you men would stick to the truth concerning the history of this office, and not falsifying to the extent that men knowing the facts in part have already had to come out in the public print and declare that your statements were false.

Yours truly,

JAMES SLEEPER,

CHAMBER'S BUS ROUTE OPPOSED BY CITY BOARD

ORANGE, Aug. 23.—That the proposed new bus route from Santa Ana to Orange, which is to go into effect when the Pacific Electric passenger service is discontinued, does not harmonize with the views of the Orange city council and many leading citizens, was made known here today.

An official of the chamber of commerce is said to be responsible for the plan of routing the busses up South Glassell street and around the plaza to the bus station on West Chapman avenue. He guided Max Green and F. D. Howell, Motor Transit officials, over the new route, this week.

Wide criticism has been voiced against this move. Members of the city council were especially concerned over the matter and steps will be taken at once to have the bus line follow the present tracks of the Pacific Electric down Lemon street.

It was pointed out that many people had bought homes and wished to live near Lemon street to take advantage of the street car service. These people would be inconvenienced by the new route, whereas residents on Glassell street are reported to be against any busses on that avenue, it is claimed. Large busses going around the plaza constitute a traffic hazard, it is declared.

It is believed that Motor Transit officials would prefer to use Lemon street south to La Veta avenue and then to Main streets because it is on a straight line with the station and would eliminate the traffic congestion at the plaza. It was further pointed out that as only local people would ride on the bus, the advertising value of seeing the plaze would be very little.

Members of the city council termed the new route just a "dream" of the commerce official and indicated that they would not authorize the Glassell street route. The Los Angeles to Santa Ana busses will not change their schedule but will continue to come into Orange from Orana on Chapman avenue and go out the same way.

Richards proposed at the city council meeting yesterday that a discrimination be made in the city tax on a garage doing only small repair work and a large garage that repairs and retails automobiles. The city council agreed to assess the small garages $3 and the large ones the regular rate of $5.

The request of W. G. Knox, consulting engineer on the new storm drain, for the first half of the $200 fee promised him, was authorized paid. The city ordinance providing that storage tanks for gasoline, kerosene over 50 gallons must be buried at least five feet in the ground was changed to four feet to conform with the state law.

The Eureka Casualty company, represented in Orange by Paul Muench, was given the contingent liability insurance on city owned automobiles. The amount was $490.

The council granted the Chamber of Commerce the usual $350 for an exhibit at the county fair. The commerce officials will have complete charge of the exhibit.

GAS EMPLOYES FINISH WORK ON GAS MAINS

ORANGE, Aug. 23.—Work was virtually completed today on the replacement of the gas mains on North Glassell street between Maple street and the plaza and the crew of 25 men prepared to move on, probably to Fullerton.

Charles Berge, foreman, superintended the work of putting a new three-inch gas main down the west side of the street and service lines to the stores fronting on Glassell street. Berge stated that the old main was in good condition after 30 years of service but that the service pipes were in very bad shape and needed replacing.

Work started on the project Monday and the 700-foot ditch was dug in two days. Stores fronting on the west side were connected by digging open ditches but tunnels were excavated to the eastern business houses. Besides laying new pipe, the gas meters were put in the sidewalk, said to be a big improvement over the old method.

It was necessary to dig a ditch to the center of the plaza to connect the Glassell line with the main pipe on Chapman avenue. All the ditches have been filled with dirt and will be repaved in a short time, it was stated by Berge. The gas company followed out the policy of replacing a certain amount of gas lines each year.

PLAZA REST ROOMS URGED BY C. OF C.

The matter probably will come before the city council at the next meeting September 2. It has been suggested that the rest rooms be built underground.

The directors also discussed the question of road direction signs in Orange, it being shown that many drivers were confused by the present signs at the plaza. After some discussion, the West Chapman sign committee, composed of K. W. Watson, C. C. Bonebrake and George Gilmore, was instructed to make a general survey of the sign situation.

ORANGE MAN'S RANCH SOUGHT IN OIL LEASE

ORANGE, Aug. 23.—Efforts of an oil company to lease a section of property between La Habra and the Murphy Oil company's Murphy lease was made known today by C. L. Wilson jr., of 135 North Main street, who is a co-owner of 130 acres in that section.

Wilson and Dr. J .L. Beebe, of Anaheim, bought the 130 acres of walnuts, oranges and persimmons two weeks ago for $225,000, it was learned today. The deal is now in escrow. The former owner was the Hualde Ranch company, all the land being located north of Fullerton near the Bastanchury ranch. The Wilson and Beebe purchase is on Ocean road and the road to the Murphy lease.

Wilson stated today that a lease to the oil company would probably be signed the first part of next week. It is understood that the agreement will provide that drilling is to start on the lease within 60 days. It was reported that the former owners were willing to sign a lease. The property has 70 acres of walnuts with the rest in oranges and persimmons.

F. D. McFadden, who owns property just north of Ocean avenue, has been in conference with the lease promoters but is unwilling to take the provision that the company be given a six month drilling agreement without rental it is reported. Many other property owners in that district are being interviewed.

C. C. YOUNG

Endorsed by Charles C. Chapman

TO MY FRIENDS IN ORANGE COUNTY:

A number of my friends have asked me to state my preference of candidates for the office of Governor. Believing that others may also be interested, I make this brief statement, without attempting any extended discussion.

During the term of Governor C. C. Young, I have been intimately connected with him and his administration. I know of the thoughtful planning and conscientious attention he gives to the affairs of State. I recognize his upright Christian character, his sterling honesty, the breadth of his vision and his sincere determination to rightly carry out his obligation to the people of California.

I am familiar also with the splendid organization which Governor Young has developed for the economical and efficient management of the vast business of our great state. It would be most unwise to overthrow this organization, which is working so splendidly and to disrupt his great program of statewide development.

There is not now, nor has there ever been, a breath of scandal regarding Governor Young or his administration. Governor C. C. Young stands unalterably for the rigid enforcement of the "Dry" laws of our State and Nation. We must center our efforts on one "Dry" candidate to prevent the election of Mr. Rolph, a well-known "wet." His election would be a calamity and would make the "wets" through the Nation jubilant over the capture of President Hoover's own State.

Be careful therefore, how you vote.

A vote for C. C. Young is safest.

CHARLES C. CHAPMAN.

The Other Bullet

By Nancy Barr Mavity

Aline Everett is being tried for the murder of her ranch manager, Mortison. Involved in the case are Aline, her husband, Max Everett; her sister, Marjorie, who left the ranch the day of the murder; her housekeeper, Mrs. Coak; Mrs. Coak's daughter, whom Mortison has wronged; Julio, a sheepherder on the Everett ranch who loves Mrs. Coak's daughter, and an old man who lives near the ranch and who believes that Mortison used witchcraft and deserved to die.

Peter Piper, a newspaper reporter, has been spending a vacation in the Sierras near the ranch and is working with the sheriff. He discovered the body and found that Mortison was shot twice while seated at a table. Aline declares her first bullet went wild and that Mortison was seated when she fired. Peter finds the bullet in the garden and it remains to be discovered who fired the othr bullet and which one entered Mortison's body first.

At the trial Aline will not play up to her attorney, Travis, who wishes to conciliate an antagonistic jury. Linforth is the prosecuting attorney.

Peter is called as a witness and tells of seeing Mortison dead after he had summoned to the house by Mrs. Coak. Linforth declares the bullet Peter found in the garden may have been fired by the reporter. As the trial procedes Linforth asks Aline if her relations with Mortison were improper. She answers "No."

It is found that Marjorie went to New York following the shooting and has sailed for Europe.

A note of intense interest is introduced into the trial when it is found that Emil Kurtner, famous criminologist has been called as a witness.

CHAPTER 20

Kurtner betrayed no consciousness of the flurry caused by his entrance as he took the stand and gave his occupation as "consulting criminologist in the fields of physics and chemistry." He answered the preliminary questions qualifying him as an expert as if he were repeating by rote a page out of a catalogue.

Kurtner was a man whose life was ruled by a hobby—but no one, not even the reporters, for whom a case in which Kurtner figured was guaranteed to outdistance the fictional exploits of Sherlock Holmes—knew what that hobby was. He had abandoned a distinguished career as an engineer to devote himself to pure chemistry, and later had resigned his chair as professor in a great university when his peculiar genius, which he termed merely "the application of knowledge," enabled him to earn more from a single case than his university salary amounted to in a year.

But it was not ambition for either fame or money which had led Kurtner to his final choice of a profession. Hidden deep within him was the questing spirit of adventure. Physical adventure was far too crude to satisfy that craving. Intellectual adventure had held him for a time, until his wide-ranging curiosity had sated itself in the solving of inanimate problems. Humanity alone was capable of infinite variation. In the old Greek tragedies, human beings had struggled vainly against inscrutable and ineluctable fate. The terms of the struggle had changed—but the vital stress of the conflict endured. Only now, in place of fate was science; science, which was beyond the reach of the most passionate human longings, but whose operations Kurtner could follow, with his eyes at the microscope, spectator of the tremendous drama of man and circumstance.

Science had enabled him to describe, from a pinch of dust found in an overall pocket, a famous bandit-murderer who had escaped scot free in the northern forests. The fragments of a broken window had revealed an apparently accidental factory explosion as a carefully planned scheme of murder, disguised as suicide, for the sake of a large insurance. Because of a hat dropped forty miles from the scene of a burning farm house, science had tracked the man who thought he had made identification of his victim impossible and had reduced to ashes every trace of his crime.

Kurtner himself, in all his exploits, had appeared aloof from the element of dramatic surprise which had endeared him to the press. His lofty indifference to juries was the despair of lawyers. What no one suspected—so carefully was it concealed under the dry technicality of his manner—was the sense of drama which obtained a deep and abiding satisfaction in his laboratory. That was the scene of the play, where human being won their release or submitted to inevitable destruction as a result of their collision with inexorable fact.

He addressed the jury now, not as a tribunal to be convinced, but as if he were delivering a lecture which they could understand or not, according to their capacities.

"I have been permitted to examine the bullets taken from the body of the deceased, and the photographs submitted to me by Mr. Piper and taken under his supervision are photographs of those bullets here in evidence," he began, dropping his voice as if each sentence were a nail driven into his argument by a single stroke of the hammer.

"I have also examined two other bullets—one found by Mr. Piper in the bushes behind the Mortison cottage, and the other fired by him from the pistol admitted in evidence as that fired by Mrs. Everett. Four shells were also found, two in the living room, of the lodge, one by the pathway in front of the lodge, and the fourth picked up by Mr. Piper immediately after his own shot. Each of these bullets, and each of these shells, was fired from a .45 Colt automatic pistol. So many pistols of this type were not returned by discharged soldiers, although their return was required, that they are still quite common."

Max Everett, from his place beside Aline, flushed with guilty embarrassment, but Kurtner ignored him.

"Each of these bullets, and the corresponding shells, came from the same make of firearm. Nevertheless, it is quite easy to determine whether they all were actually fired from the same weapon. Thanks to Mr. Piper, I was able to obtain a test bullet from the pistol of Mrs. Everett. We will call that bullet, and its corresponding shell, A and A-prime."

"It is, of course, well known that every firearm leaves what we may call its individual 'fingerprint" on the bullets fired from it. We speak of the standardized monotony of the machine age; but as a matter of fact, not only do no two ammunition companies make bullets of a given size and calibre exactly alike, but it is physically impossible on the same machines, and with the same tools, to make a gun barrel which will fail to leave individual and characteristic marks on the bullets fired through it.

"I need only refer you to the work of Major Calvin Goddard and his associates in the Bureau of Forensic Ballistics in New York. By actual experiment they have proved that these characteristic differences are found even in the barrels of guns manufactured in direct succession from the same machines, as for the human hand, to produce two absolutely identical objects."

"Slower!" The word was hissed in an imploring stage whisper by Everts.

Pencils raced furiously across copy paper while Kurtner paused, twirling a small pocket lens in fingers sensitive as fluttering antennae.

"As to the shells," he went on, "an equally positive identification is made possible by the identations marked on the shell's surface at the instant of firing. The firing pin leaves its imprint dented on the primer of the shell; furthermore, marks on the inside of the barrel, made either by a hand file or milling machine, are transferred to the breech of the shell when the bullet is fired. These marks are absolutely individual and cannot be duplicated by any other firearm.

"I will now return to the bullets in question, which I examined by the aid of a filar micrometer microscope with goniometer attachment, measuring the width and the grooves on a fired bullet to one-ten-thousandths of a milimeter, together with a precision gauge which measures the depths of the grooves on a fired bullet to the same degree. Do I make myself clear?"

"Spell it!" the reporters groaned.

"I think perhaps the jury—" Travis suggested.

"An explanation of the method used is necessary to a complete demonstration," Kurtner said reprovingly. "However, I have here a set of photographs which will immediately make my meaning clear."

"May I see them?" Linforth asked hastily, as Kurtner extracted the photographs from his brief case and extended them towards the jury.

"Certainly."

Linforth examined the prints as if he were rather afraid of them, but finally, with a puzzled frown, returned them.

"I have no objection to the jury's seeing these—if they can get anything out of them," he said grudgingly.

"Just wait—they will," Travis murmured under his breath.

"A is the bullet fired by Mr. Piper from Mrs. Everett's pistol; B is the bullet found by Mr. Piper in the shrubbery—and C is a photograph of the bullet extracted from the lung of the deceased. The prints are sufficiently magnified so that it is quite posible with the naked eye to determine that these three bullets are identical in their markings. Therefore all three of them were fired from the same pistol."

Kurtner's voice dropped and Peter unconsciously waited for him to add the final 'Q. E. D.' of a demonstration in geometry.

"Bullet D extracted from Mortison's jugular vein, on the other hand, is readily seen to have come from a different weapon altogether. The dotted lines extending to the edge of the paper will show the most obvious points of divergence." The jury, with this concrete support of Kurtner's abstractions to guide, bent absorbed heads over the prints.

"The shells, similarly examined and identified, have also been photographed.I f I have your permission—"

"Your honor, I don't see where all this is leading—" Linforth protested.

"Well, you've let the jury have the bullets; you can hardly deny them the shells," Judge Wood interposed patiently.

"As you will see," Kurtner continued, ignoring the brief interruption, "Shells A. B. and C are identical—the test shell from the bullet fired by Mr. Piper from Mrs. Everett's pistol, the shell found outside the door, and one of the shells on the floor of the room. D, the other shell from the living room floor, fails to correspond. It is therefore evident that the shot which lodged in Mortison's jugular vein and the one fired into his lung did not come from the same weapon. The single shot in the lung is the only one which can be ascribed to the pistol in question. Doubtless this point has already been covered in the medical testimony, but I may add that on examining the body, by permission of the sheriff, I noted that shot D, through the jugular vein, was fired obliquely from the side, while Mrs. Everett's shot was fired from a position directly facing the deceased.

"We now come to a very crucial question—which of those shots was fired first? By a fortunate circumstance, I was able to analyze a sample of the blood of the man who was killed, obtained within a short time of his death. The chemical analysis of this blood, which Mr. Piper collected on his handkerchief when he examined the body on the day of the murder—"

The district attorney could contain himself no longer. He leaped to his feet ,glaring balefully at Peter, who met his gaze with a wide and provocative grin.

"Your honor, I object to the leading part which the Herald newspaper is taking in this case! This—this Piper had no business to be there at all! And if he was there, he had no right to obstruct the course of justice and tamper with the evidence in the interests of a sensational press. I understood that Mr. Travis was in charge of the defense. If he cares to give it over to a reporter, let him say so."

Peter cast a wary, upturned glance at the judge, decided that he could risk it, and lounged to his feet.

"I'm sorry the district attorney finds my presence on the scene so embarrassing," he said. "As a matter of fact, I wasn't there for the paper at all. If I could be clever enough to be put on murder stories before they happened, I'd probably get that long-awaited raise in salary."

"No more of this altercation, gentlemen." If anybody ever said "tut-tut," Judge Wood's tone implied that he would have said it. "Mr. Piper does not appear to me to have tampered with the evidence—he has merely gathered some which would otherwise have been overlooked. Go on, please, Mr. Kurtner."

The antennae-like fingers ceased twirling the pocket lens.

"The chemical analysis of this blood shows," Kurtner said in his dry, dictatorial manner, "that the deceased was not attacked unawares, while he was sitting quietly at his desk. At the time of his death, his physical condition was that of a man who has been running at utmost speed!"

Mrs. Belle Spangler for Tax Collector

MRS. SPANGLER SAYS:

"I am glad for this privilege to speak to the voters of Orange county. I have been persuaded by kind friends to become a candidate for the office of tax collector for Orange county. The friends in the various groups with which I have worked have been so generous of their time and energy on my behalf, and many of them have contributed in a material way to make it possible for me to bring my name before you, that my heart is full of gratitude to them for their kindness. I want to thank the friends throughout the county for the reception they have given me in the various localities, for the assurance of support.

"I am glad that I have had that training and educational requisites, in the judgment of these friends, for filling this office. It is a wonderful thing at a time such as I am experiencing to have so many friends. When I did what I could along the lines that I believed worth while on behalf of the various civic organizations, I did not dream that it was bread being cast upon the waters that would be returned in any such substantial way as has been done during this campaign.

"The only reward I had ever sought was the reward that comes from a consciousness of doing one's best for those things that one deems worth while and assuming and performing the responsibilities assigned me, so that this great response which I have received is more appreciated.

"I would not ask you to vote for me simply because I am a woman, but certainly I have the right to ask that you shall not vote for my opponent simply because he is a man. When the obligations and burdens of life must be borne as they are being borne by so many, by the women in equal degree and in some cases even to a higher degree than they are born by the men, surely the women have equal claim upon your suffrage for a position which they are capable of filling.

"There is only one woman office holder today in the county. All the other offices are filled by men, so that if women are equal to men, certainly it is not asking too much to ask for your support. I am not among those who believes that officers should be voted out simply because they have been in office for two or three terms, but certainly it is not being unfair when one suggests, with the men holding practically all the offices, that one single office that has been occupied by the incumbent for some 24 years could be given to a woman candidate, capable of performing the service.

"In closing, I want to again thank my friends without whose aid I would not have been able to have carried on a campaign at all. It takes money and time to do these things, and without both being furnished through the kindness of those who have come so wonderfully to my aid, I would be unable even to suggest that there is a real possibility of my election. But as the campaign has gone with such fine support, I am assured that not only are the chances good, but on every hand the voters are declaring that they will give their votes. For this again I thank my friends, among whom I hope I can include those who are listening to my talk."

EDITORIAL FROM SEAL BEACH PORT AND WAVE

Mrs. Belle Spangler for Tax Collector

Popular Orange County Woman Enters Race As Only Woman Contestant Running for County Office. Backers insist That She Is Qualified to Handle This Office in a Businesslike Manner.

Mrs. Belle Spangler, who is a candidate for County Tax Collector, at the primary next Tuesday, enters the race with a background of natural qualifications and a training that will enable her to conduct this important office in most satisfactory manner.

Mrs. Spangler is the self-supporting head of a family and is one of the best known women in Orange county. She has given much of her time, during the years she has lived in the county to active work in civic, school and women's affairs. Because of the manner in which she has succeeded at everything she has been connected with, she has won the enthusiastic support of hundreds of people over the entire county.

Mrs. Spangler, soon after she came to Santa Ana, became president of the City Parent-Teacher Association and later was made president of the Fourth District Parent-Teacher Association, which is a county-wide organization. In this work she was thrown in contact with people over the entire county, who soon learned to respect her ability and who are now working for her in this campaign.

Mrs. Spangler has proven that she is able to work out details and has on many occasions demonstrated her ability to handle situations that were complicated and required effort and capacity. She believes that the office of Tax Collector is one in which the greatest service may be rendered and pledges herself, if elected, to work to the good of all the people of Orange county and to be at their service all of the time.

Voters who have had the opportunity of meeting Mrs. Spangler personally have been very loud in their praise of her charm and grace. Of the 19 county officials only one is held by a woman and Mrs. Spangler, as well as her hundreds of backers, feel that she is qualified and asks the support of the voters in the primary next Tuesday.

Mrs. Spangler has had ten years banking experience in the state of California.

MRS. J. V. KELSEY,

of Garden Grove, says:

Friends and Voters of Orange County:

It is indeed a great pleasure to speak on behalf of the candidacy of Mrs. Belle Spangler for Orange County Tax Collector.

There are some things that I can say to you in this personal way that are difficult to say through ordinary advertising methods. Mrs. Spangler is a noble, refined, well educated, able woman. She not only speaks the English language but speaks and interprets Spanish language as well, she is well equipped for the position she seeks. She has unfortunately been thrown entirely upon her own resources. She has two daughters, whose education must be completed. This and all other of her obligations Mrs. Spangler is bravely and beautifully meeting.

Those of us who have become acquainted with her who have watched her good work relating to the various civic organizations, such as the Society for Crippled Children, Parent Teacher Associations, Womens Clubs, all of which she is a member, Chamber of Commerce and to every fine cause to which the citizens, the Fathers, Mothers and children should be interested, have been very anxious that she be known and that her claim to the position of Tax Collector might be known.

Mrs. Spangler has had ten years' banking experience. She is thoroughly acquainted with every phase of clerical work. She has executive ability has on many occasions directed others in various forms of service. There is probably no person running for public office in Orange County better equipped for the office which he or she seeks than is Mrs. Spangler. She is not self seeking. She would have been unable to carry on this campaign at all were it not for the hundreds of loyal friends she has made during her years of residence in Orange County. The friends that have known her in the activities in which she has engaged. These have contributed of their time in making the voters acquainted with her, as far as possible, and others have contributed of their means to pay for advertising and other expenses so that the voters may have this opportunity of voting for this capable woman, and thereby have a fine servant, and she in turn might realize that her womanhood, her interest in the home, and her devoted life are appreciated.

With one exception she is the only woman contestant running for office in Orange County. With 19 offices to fill only one other of the 19 has a woman occupying it. We feel that it is only fair and right, regardless of how you voters may vote on any question, to cast a vote for Mrs. Spangler for this office for which she is so eminently fitted.

Mrs. Spangler has not been able to conduct as strong and active a campaign for the last two weeks as she might have done were it not for the fact that her mother, living with her, is so seriously ill as to fear that she might not last through any particular day. Mrs. Spangler, when she could, has carried on all fine public enterprises, faithful as a Mother, she has been showing the same devotion at this crucial time for her Mother.

I am sure every Voter who knows the facts and who knows the capabilities of Mrs. Spangler will cast his or her vote for her and in so doing will be more certain that his vote has performed a fine service than for any other candidate for whom he will vote on Primary Election Day.

I am sure there is no obligation that the Voters are under that would interfere with our voting for Mrs. Spangler. It is entirely possible that he who has been elected to this office for now some 24 years may in the selection of Mrs. Spangler to continue the work finally be grateful for it, in seeing a woman, well equipped, deserving and capable to carry the office on. It is possible that he may be thankful then, that at the end of this long period, he has been given the opportunity for a rest and recreation with a knowledge that the office with whom he has been so long connected is in capable and faithful hands.

I am sure when the Voters of Orange County place Mrs. Spangler as County Tax Collector she will devote her entire time to the duties of her office in an efficient and conscientious manner.

I urge all voting citizens of Orange County to exercise the right that belongs to them as American Citizens that of casting his or her vote next Tuesday, August 26th, and in so doing I especially urge whatever else you do place your cross opposite the name of Belle Spangler for Collector of Taxes.

The Only Woman Contestant Running for a County Office Self Supporting Head of a Family. Civic Leader, Capable and Efficient. Ten Years' Banking Experience in California.

THE YACHTING THRILL

A great deal has been written about the thrills afforded by an international yacht race such as the one about to occur between Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock V and the American cup defender.

These thrills in the past I have failed to appreciate in a very big way. Perhaps this was because in the last races between a Lipton craft and an American yacht, the victory was largely trigonometrical. The first boat to finish did not win the race; triumph was decided after measurements had been gone over carefully in the laboratory.

Then again, there were always a few garbage scows and it seemed the yachts were always getting into these fellows' way.

But this year there is to be at least one thrill—the yacht that crosses the finish line first will win the race. Disposition of the $500 mug that has cost Lipton and a dozen or so American millionaires some $40,000,000 since the struggle for it was started, will be decided on a basis of the best three out of five, over a 30-mile course off Newport.

MONEY CAST ON WATERS

Four American boats, built and outfitted by American millionaires, have been competing since July for the honor of defending the strange-looking cup for which Sir Thomas shows such lasting affection. These are the Yankee, the Whirlwind, the Weetamoe and the Enterprise. The struggle will continue until September, with the first race for the cup scheduled to start on September 13. Each of these four boats will have set its owners back some $700,000 before race time, and only one will battle the Lipton boat.

Sir Thomas, who nearly won the cup the last time the yachts vied, in 1920, taking the first two heats, must be conceded at least this: he is the world's greatest sportsman. He flung the first of his challenges in 1899. His Shamrock I was beaten three straight by the Columbia. He came back for more two years later with a Shamrock II. He was beaten in exactly the same way by the same boat.

In 1903 he sent across the Shamrock III, and this craft ate up so much nautical dust kicked up by the Reliance in three straight races that Sir Thomas didn't even whisper about the cup for 10 years.

In 1913 he came right back again, but the war broke while his Shamrock IV was in mid-Atlantic. The boat was placed in dry dock for four years. Then came the series of battles with the Resolute, sailed by Charles Francis Adams. Twice the Shamrock IV defeated the Resolute, but Adams came back to win in the last three heats.

MUST HE ALWAYS LOSE?

Now Lipton is fighting again. With his new boat, the Shamrock V, and some small change left out of $1,000,000 after building the craft, Sir Thomas is renewing a 30 year struggle in which he always has lost.

There will be thrills in this race from time to time, of course, but the greatest thrill for me would be to see a gentleman like Sir Tom win.

Finals Of Women's Net Tourney Postponed

MRS. HARPER, BETTY NUTHALL CLASH SUNDAY

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Finals of the National women's singles and doubles tennis championships, scheduled for today, were postponed until tomorrow because of rain. The tournament committee did not reach a decision for postponement until midday despite an overnight drizzle which turned into a driving rain this morning.

By FRANK GETTY
(United Press Sports Editor)

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 23.—The women's national singles championship of the United States, which has been sprouting wings quite unnoticed by the experts ever since Helen Wills became Mrs. Moody, appears about to take flight overseas for the first time in nearly half a century of tennis.

Betty Nuthall, blonde young English girl whose tenis career abroad has paralleled that of Mrs. Moody in this country, was to play Mrs. Lawrence Harper of Oakland, Calif., in the finals of the 43rd national women's championship at Forest Hills this afternoon, and those who do not believe Betty will triumph in straight sets are few.

Mrs. Harper, a slender and attractive young player, seeded No. 1 among the American players entered in the tournament, hardly has the game to stop a driving, calculating tennis expert such as England's representative.

Miss Marjorie Morrill of Dedham, Mass., alone had the game to halt Miss Nuthall, and Miss Morrill missed out in the semi-finals yesterday when she bowed to the English girl in three sets.

The chances are that Miss Nuthall not only will carry the singles championship overseas for the first time, but will share with pretty little Sarah Palfrey of Boston the honor of winning the women's doubles title. Miss Nuthall and Miss Palfrey meet Mrs. Harper and Miss Edith Cross of San Francisco in the doubles final.

While Mrs. Harper has worthily upheld the honor accorded her when she was seeded No. 1 in the present championship, Miss Cross has been a decided disappointment and little help to her partner in the doubles matches played thus far.

Mrs. Harper and Miss Cross defeated Miss Josephine Cruickshank and Miss Marjorie Gladman in the one semi-final match late yesterday, 6-4, 2-6, 6-4, while Miss Nuthall and Miss Palfrey eliminated Miss Penelope Anderson and Miss Morrill 6-2, 6-1.

Two Matches On Baseball Sked Sunday

George Lackaye, well known Santa Ana sportsman, tomorrow will recruit a squad of Santa Ana baseball players to play Jim Culver's reorganized Huntington Beach community nine at the Huntington Beach city park.

They will begin hostilities at 2:15 p. m. Lackaye has not announced his lineup.

Another Sunday game of local interest is scheduled for the Orange County Fair grounds where D. Eyman Huff's Anapauma Rancho meets the Riverside All-Stars at 2:15. Al Encinas will toil for the Huffmen with Tony Rego or Joe Maldonado back of the log.

Anapauma also has a contest scheduled a week from Sunday with a crack Filipino team from Los Angeles.

WORLD'S BEST SPRINTERS BID FOR NEW MARK

PITT STADIUM, PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 23.—Eddie Tolan, University of Michigan ace and holder of the United States record, won the 100 yard dash in 9.7 seconds in the Amateur Athletic union games today.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 23. — The hot-foot boys, George Simpson, Eddie Tolan, Claude Bracey, Cy Leland, et al, kin of St. Vitus and despair of the watch, will go for another constitutional over the cinders this afternoon at the Pitt stadium, and, in a series of skirmishes, will attempt to abate and discontinue all outstanding records at 100 and 220 yards.

These boys, it seems, were given the hot-foot, i. e., a lighted match inserted between the sole and the upper of a shoe, early in life and since then they haven't been on the ground long enough to go back home for the Christmas holidays.

With Wykoff, who is not here, and Percy Williams, the Canadian, they are the greatest sprinters in the world and so this afternoon they plan to make the national senior track and field games their tinder and kindling and the record books a funeral pyre. The smoke of which will be seen around the world. Hec Dyer, the Stanford man, and Jack Elder, who once beat Williams, also are dow non the books as entries in the championship century and furlong.

A new A. A. U. record in the hundred would seem to be almost ordained. At least three men in the race, Simpson, Bracey and Tolan, have beaten the games record of 9 3-4 and, since the track is faster than a dance floor and the weather promised a breathless quiet not even Tolan's listed world record of 9 5-10 was deemed to be immune. Simpson did 9 2-5 once or twice and Wykoff touched the same mark on at least one other occasion but neither effort received official tolerance, Simpson's bid being refused because he used starting blocks and Wykoff's probably for no good reason at all.

STARS NOW NEED BUT ONE VICTORY TO CINCH TITLE IN NATIONAL NIGHT RACE

In baseball there is nothing quite as uncertain as the uncertainty of what may happen when two closely matched teams get together, but with the deepest sense of charity for all, today might just as well be set aside as the fit and proper time to mark the sad passing of the burned-out Whittier Quakers.

Pitched into a state of helplessness by the tanned Joe Cornelius, Whittier was virtually eliminated from the National Night league championship playoffs when blanked, 2-0, by the Santa Ana Stars before a swashbuckling crowd of 3000 in the Santa Ana Bowl last night.

Needing only one more victory in three games, Santa Ana looks "in" to all intents and purposes, and it would not be surprising if the Stars cinch the crown at Whittier Monday night.

So far Cornelius has been purely and simply too good for Whittier.

The "Iron Man" drew "String" McDonnell in the first game of the series, and outpitched his, giving the Quakers one run and five hits.

Cornelius Outpitches Johnson

Last night he beat the other half of the crack mound staff, Lloyd Johnson, and was stingier yet. Three singles and two walks represented the sum and substance of the Whittier disturbance. Cornelius fanned seven. Only one Whittier runner got further than first base, and he saw no scenery beyond second.

Although Cornelius has given many masterful exhibitions through a season that has seen him score 22 victories as against but three reverses, last night's demonstration perhaps was his most brilliant.

Johnson pitched well, too, and McDonnell, who went in when the portly veteran showed signs of weakening in the seventh, was invincible, so the Stars had to make their limited number of basehits mean something.

Scott Scores First Run

Darwin Scott, anything but rusty for all his weeks of solitude in the dugouts, made the first hit and the first run of the imbroglio.

Scott started at second base instead of Leavitt Daley who was necessarily delayed in arriving at th epark.

First up in the Stars' first frame, Scott blazed a low line drive straight back at Johnson who managed to knock the ball down, but that was all. The sphere bounded toward second base but Scott beat Sucksdorf's recovery and throw to first.

Johnson immediately cut loose with a wild pitch while working on the troublesome "Memphy" Hill. Then Hill hit a high bounding ball to Sucksdorf and was thrown out, Scott moving up to third from where he scored an instant later when Johnson again wild-pitched.

Ellis Yanks Moundsman

Santa Ana got its other tally in the seventh, and "Rube" Ellis wasted no time removing Johnson when the going got tough. Bill Cole was up first but his wicked drive was arrested by First Baseman Johns who made a diving catch for the ball.

Bill Hunter then banged a slow ball into center field for a clean single, and took second on another of Johnson's numerous wild pitches.

Always dangerous in a pinch, "E n e y" Wilcox immediately scorched a single past second base and Hunter scored, sliding in ahead of "Brass" Davis' throw which caromed off the plate and let Wilcox sprint all the way to third.

Ellis then lifted Johnson and sent in McDonnell, who had pitched half a game in the left field "bull pen" anyway.

McDonnell Stops Rally

McDonnell stopped the rally. Cornelius grounded to Johns who held Wilcox on third while tagging the pitcher and then fooled Daley on a slow ball, Daley fouling it off to Rasmussen.

The Stars lost a good chance to do some damage in the third when Cornelius led off with a double down the left field foul line, but Daley flied to Denney, Hill skied to Jertberg and Merrill popped to A. Hill in rapid succession and Cornelius expired on second.

Cornelius never gave Whittier a chance to get going.

Jertberg opened the third with a sharp single past Hunter. Rasmussen fouled out to Wilcox. Jertberg took second while Hunter was tossing Johnson out at first but Moon perished on a long fly to Wayne Nelson in center field.

Arley Hill singled to left with one away in the fourth only to have Sucksdorf and Davis die on easy pops.

Bell Makes Fine Catch

Jertberg singled again in the fifth with one down but succumbed there when Randolph Bell made a brilliant running catch of Rasmussen's hard drive to the base of the sloping bank in left field and Johnson fanned.

Cornelius showed no sign whatever of wobbling until the ninth inning. He opened this stanza by tossing three straight balls to Tom Denney, then two strikes. Denney fouled off a couple and finally popped out to Wilcox in front of the plate. Arley Hill worked Cornelius for three successive balls, and then the "Iron Man" shot three strikes down the alley for the second out. Joe wasn't so successful with Sheldon, a pinch-hitter for Sucksdorf, who walked, but Ehrich, another pinch-hitter, ended the agony with a fly which the ever-alert Bell swallowed.

Baseball is a precarious proposition, a sport in which anything is liable and likely to happen, but the Stars hold the whip hand now and are going to be hard to keep out of the Southern California playoffs. S t a l w a r t pitching, remarkable catching and consistently brilliant defensive work both by infield and

PIPING 'EM OFF

Santa Ana has a right to feel pretty chesty about the outlook for its series with Whittier but the Stars must not lose their equilibrium. They might remember the sad case of Long Beach in the Southern California playoff last summer. The Acorns won the first two games from Riverside, then dropped three in a row. You never can tell in baseball.

It will be a battle of two pitchers from now on to the end. Joe Cornelius will work the rest of the series for the Stars, it is understood, and "Rube". Ellis is sure to string along with "String" McDonnell.. Llyod Johnson probably is through as far as Santa Ana is concerned. The veteran has not been effective against the Stars this season, although he turned in a very fair game last night.

Leavitt Daley played a game in Long Beach early in the evening, then climbed in a high-powered motor car furnished by the Orange county sheriff's office and arrived at the Bowl in time to enter the Santa Ana lineup at the beginning of the third inning.

Howard Dunn, the Stars' faithful batboy, made an appearance in an official red jacket, one just like the players wear. Howard carries a rabbit's foot to these games. Tuesday night he slipped it in "Eeny" Wilcox's pocket just before the catcher slammed a double that started the Stars on a winning rally. Last night Wilcox had it again when he singled Hunter home with Santa Ana's second run.

Billy Knott, former Anaheim manager, was official announcer. He borrowed a megaphone from some fan and introduced the batter as they strode to the plate.

Orvile Schuchardt, former Santa Ana outfielder, has been watching the series from the stands. He would like to be down there in a Star monkey suit again.

"Rosy" Merrill is supposed to be an easy mark for a good slow ball pitcher but he laid down two perfect bunts on change-of-pace pitching last night. It is hard to fool a good natural hitter like the "Rose."

A tobacco concern sent to the Santa Ana dugout a couple of cartons of cigarets and a dozen boxes of "chewin'." Most players must have their "chaw" during the heat of a ball game.

Little Jertberg, Whittier's crack utility man, replaced the heavy-hoofed Rodriquez in right field. He got two of the three Quaker singles and made a brilliant running catch of "Memphy" Hill's line drive to right center in the sixth. Hill has been hitting in hard luck lately.

Colton scouts have been watching the clubs in this series. The Railroaders think they can beat either team, and are anxious for the "little world series" to get under way. If the Stars manage to make it three straight over Whittier Monday, thus cinching the National Night league ribbon, the Colton playoff may begin next Friday.

W. B. Wentz unquestionably is the best umpire in this brand of night baseball. The Garden Grove guesser misses very few behind the loaf. He has the poise of an umpire and the confidence of the players, too, so gets in few arguments. "Shorty" Smith also has little trouble. "Rube" Hall made his first appearance of the series as an arbiter. He worked at second base with big Art Nunn at third.

"String" McDonnell, usually a good natured fellow, got peeved in the eighth inning when Cornelius took his own sweet time about pitching to him. Mac was anxious to hit, but finally was satisfied to draw a pass.

So far in this series catching has played almost as important a part as the pitching. Ted Rasmus-

BEACH PITCHER STARRING FOR FORD FACTORY

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Aug. 23.—Roy ("Moon") Mullins continues to make good with the Ford factory baseball team at Long Beach where he is the star pitcher for the team. Mullins pitched the high school team here to a county and district victory last season and is eligible for the team again this year if he decides to return to school.

Mullins pitched both games for the Ford team last week. In the game with Fort McArthur, Mullins allowed four hits and made eight strikeouts. He was robbed of a shutout when errors in the last inning let in two runs. The final score was 6 to 2 against the strong Fort McArthur team.

In the game Saturday with the Los Angeles Firemen, the Ford team with Mullins pitching won, 16 to 3. Mullins allowed only four hits in this game and got 15 strikeouts. Fielding errors in the last inning again prevented a shutout of the opposing team. Besides his marvelous pitching Mullins is batting above .400.

Mullins is learning a trade at the Ford factory, and keeping in practice for his baseball work.

HEAVY WIND KEEPS YACHTS IDLE AGAIN

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 23. — A strong blow from the north, accompanied by gusts of rain, held the America's cup contenders in Newport harbor today and the scheduled 30-mile race was called off by the committee.

While the big yachts would easily have weathered the blow, the committee is satisfied with their accomplishments in heavy weather and wants to learn what they will do in light airs.

Shamrock will leave her berth Monday for her first trial in American waters.

Long Beach Legion Boys Reach Finals

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., Aug. 23.—(INS)—Victorious in the semi-finals yesterday, New Orleans and Long Beach, Calif., meet here today for the All-Western championship of the American Legion junior baseball tournament and the right to compete for the national title with the winners in the All-Eastern division.

SAN QUENTIN BASEBALL CLUB SUFFERS BY UNFAIR 'TRADE'

SAN QUENTIN PRISON, Aug. 23.—A baseball scandal was brewing today in California prisons.

If this is doubted, ask any of the 4400 experienced felon fans in San Quentin prison.

In the jute mill, in the prison mess hall, in the yard—in fact, everywhere "within the walls," the word today was:

"What a raw deal for San Quentin!"

The deal referred to by the convicts was the "trade" arranged by the state prison board whereby two star players of the San Quentin baseball team, were sent to Folsom prison—"up the river"—in exchange for two non-athletic prisoners.

George Malcarne, 27, San Francisco bandit, captain of the San Quentin nine, and Atley G. Burns, 25, Los Angeles theif, were the two ordered transferred.

Captain Malcarne, a hard-hitting outfielder, and Burns, a flashy first basemen, have been mainstays of the fast penitentiary nine, which this season has scored an impressive record against semi-pro clubs in the San Francisco bay region.

Two young Folsom prisoners are slated to take the stars place in the cells here. The felon fans fear that neither can fill the shoes of either Malcarne or Burns.

The "trade" was explained today by Warden James B. Holohan. He discovered that the prison directors decided to send Malcarne and Burns "up state" to the recidivist penitentiary because the pair are "two time losers." Two young "first termers" sent to Folsom prison by mistake, are to be transferred here.

Because they were caught and convicted on charges of escaping while employed at prison road camps, the baseball-playing convicts have been ordered to Folsom, where they will serve additional terms after their current sentences expire.

The San Quentin nine has been badly weakened this season by paroles and pardons. But today's "trade" was the severest blow rendered the team.

The loss of Captain Malcarne will be felt keenly. Since he was incarcerated in 1924, he has been an outstanding player, and he was serving a 15-year term, the fans were assured of his services until 1939.

Burns "contract" was not to expire until 1933.

Re-organization of the team was being discussed today by Gussie (Swede) Poulson, president of the San Quentin prison baseball club. Poulson, who plays in the outfield, and Bob Brown, third baseman, are the new "board of strategy." Each is serving a life term for murder.

SHOOTING with SHUTE by DENNY SHUTE

Relaxation and putting go hand in hand, it seems, and today I want to tell you a story illustrating both. Incidentally, the story is about one of the greatest holes I ever saw played. And Bobby Jones was the player.

The scene was the fifth hole at Scioto during the National Open in 1926. The hole is a fairly long two-shotter, with a double terraced green.

Bobby's second stroke was a perfect spoon shot up to the green that rolled up even with the cup and not more than six inches to the side. Because of the terrace, however, it rolled back down some 40 feet almost to the edge of the green.

Most golfers would have cussed the man who placed the cup in such a place as to penalize an almost perfect shot. But not Jones. He was just as calm and relaxed as if he had not experienced a tough break and proceeded to concentrate on his next shot, as he should.

He did a pretty good job of it I guess. Sighting those terraces, Bobby let fly and that ball walked right up to the cup and plopped in like it had eyes.

You probably recall that Bobby won the Open that year, only a short time after he had come home with the British Open in his possession.

enforce the law!

That has been the keynote of my administration as sheriff of Orange county. Enforcement of the law! The liquor law! All laws! The whole energy of my office has been devoted to keeping Orange county clean and free of crime. For eight years this has been done to the fullest extent that is humanly possible with the limited number of deputies that is allowed the sheriff.

W. L. Peters, department of justice in charge of enforcement of the prohibition laws, headquarters in Los Angeles, has commended this office for cooperation with his department and will be glad to give information concerning this efficient assistance on the part of the Orange county officers operating out of my office.

my opponents

Talk about promoting cooperation between various enforcement agencies of the county * * * giving a businesslike and economical administration (though they are not just clear as to ways and means) * * * selecting good, clean men for deputies. In this they are merely reciting the facts of my own record which perhaps has furnished their ideas. When they stress their interest in the cases of boys and girls they are showing an admirable sentiment, in which we all agree, but their unfamiliarity with the duties of the sheriff's office has betrayed them. The sheriff's office has no authority over juvenile cases which are handled exclusively by juvenile authorities. As to cooperative law enforcement between the sheriff's office and other enforcement agencies, I submit that in organizing the Orange County Peace Officers' association and serving as its first president I have contributed the greatest constructive step in cooperation that this county has taken. In addition, I have served as president of the State Peace Officers' association. Throughout my administration I have preached and practiced cooperation with police departments. As to efficient administration my record must speak for itself. As to economical administration informed opinion will agree that the sheriff's office is on bedrock economy basis.

are able, upright and of moral integrity—a credit to the county. Whenever undesirability has appeared it has been weeded out. With the result that my staff today consists of alert, well trained workers, self-respecting and respected; doing a splendid work under the handicap of lack of numbers. Most of you know them.

E. E. French, under sheriff
O. K. Forgy, civil deputy
Don Mozley, office deputy
Miss Cora Kurrle, office deputy

Fred Humiston, court bailiff

Tax Payers and Voters

We want to warn you against last minute mis-statements, untruths, and vile insinuations which are being published against James Sleeper by the MONTGOMERY for Assessor Club.

WILLIAM SCHUMACHER is Advisor to Mr. Montgomery. He is Supervisor and has been a member of the Board of Equalization for the past eighteen years. Another advisor is LOTUS H. LOUDON, member of the late Grand Jury, Publisher of the Anaheim Bulletin. Mr. Schumacher and Mr. Loudon betrayed their duty which they owe to the people of Orange County if they knew these statements to be true, and did not bring them before the late Board of Equalization and have these assessments equalized with other properties of the County. They knew their statements would not stand before any body of fair-minded men. They are now making these statements not in your interest, but to catch your votes.

In the twenty years there has not been thirty-five changes made by the Board of Equalization in his assessments; do you think this would be so if he had favored the big interests as they are trying to make you believe?

The Board of Equalization is composed of tax payers; do you think that they would stand for his favoring the Irvine Company or any other corporation and place the burden on themselves and you? No, not on your life, as they are against carrying the big fellows' burden as well as you.

Ask Supervisor SCHUMACHER and Mr. Loudon why these matters were not brought before the Board of Equalization and see them squirm and make excuses.

In yesterday's advertisement published in The Register and other county papers, Mr. Montgomery compared the acreage of all of Orange county with the acreage owned by the Irvine interests. He then compared the total assessment of all of Orange county with the Irvine assessment. But in the total county assessment there is included the assessed value of all improvements, buildings, etc. To compare the value of acreage, most of it mountainous ranch land, the balance grain and citrus lands, with land located in incorporated cities and improved with buildings, is manifestly unfair. But in the argument used by Montgomery, much of the worst land in the county is compared with the best, with the hope that the gullible will not see through it, and will swallow the argument and proceed to vote their prejudices.

James Sleeper has tried to give every taxpayer, large or small, a just and equitable assessment and has fought the big interests for years, which most of the people of the county know. He has invited the tax payers of this county to come to the assessor's office and compare and see any assessments in the county, there being no assessments of any one covered up.

He has tried to conduct a clean campaign, giving facts and not mis-statements, and we are sure the people of this County will not support a man who tries to gain an office by mis-statements, untruths and insinuations.

"ANYBODY'S WOMAN" STARTS AT WEST COAST

Richard Barthelmess At Fox-Broadway On Monday

"DAWN PATROL" IS GREAT AIR BATTLE FILM

Richard Barthelmess, First National-Vitraphone star, makes his first appearance in an air story in "The Dawn Patrol," which comes to the Fox Broadway theater Monday.

John Monk Saunders wrote the original screen story of "The Dawn Patrol," which was adapted and dialogued by Seton Miller and Dan Totheroh. It is a highly dramatic mirror of those early years of the World war "schoolboy" flyers in the British air service were compelled to face highly organized German aces, when their own mediocre equipment was forced to fight against the more modern enemy planes.

Douglas Fairbanks, jr. plays an important supporting role, while other parts are in the hands of Neil Hamilton, Gardner James, Clyde Cook, James Finalyson, Frank McHugh, William Janney, Edmund Breon and others. Howard Hawks directed "The Dawn Patrol" and brought to use his many years of flying and directorial experience. Ernie Haller, who has been with Barthelmess for several years, again acts as chief cinematographer.

China has a mountain of alum 100 feet high.

RICHARD BARTHELMESS

First National star, who comes to the Fox Broadway theater Monday in his first big air picture, "The Dawn Patrol," said to be one of the greatest air thrillers ever made.

COOGAN STATISTICS

The latest figures on the growing Jackie Coogan, who plays the title role in Paramount's filmization of Mark Train's "Tom Sawyer," shows he is 15 years of age, five feet in height, weighs 95 pounds and has dark blonde hair and brown eyes.

ROGERS' FILM AT WEST COAST THEATER TODAY

"So This Is London," latest Will Rogers farce, which has been showing at the Fox Broadway theater since last Monday will be given a week's run in Santa Ana. The picture, by popular demand ,will be taken to the Fox-West Coast theater to run today and Sunday.

Rogers gives an exceptional performance in "So This Is London." His brand of wit goes over as in no other picture he has ever made, not excluding "They Had to See Paris," his first big picture, which was seen here several months ago.

The picture has broken all Santa Ana records for attendance, according to Norman Sprowl, Fox theater manager. It has drawn better than "All Quiet on The Western Front," or any of the Greta Garbo production, he claimed.

The story concerns a Texan, who with his wife and son go to England, supposedly on a business trip. The boy falls in love with an English girl on the boat going over, thereby arousing the ire of his father for "those foreigners." How the Rogers crash the gates of England's best society create many amusing situations.

A Fox Movietone news reel also is shown.

WALKER'S WILL STAGE DOUBLE BILL SUNDAY

A double feature bill is coming to Walker's State Sunday.

Warner Bros. did well in selecting "Hearts in Exile" for the fair Dolores Costello. It is the first time she has appeared in the role of a Russian peasant girl and her performance proves that she is one of the most versatile of screen actresses. The picture is an exciting story of love and heartbreak, laid in the midst of the peasantry of Moscow and the great icy wastes of the Siberian prison camps.

Miss Costello gives a truly fine performance as the little Russian girl who is torn between marrying her peasant lover or the grand nobiman, Baron Palma. She marries the Baron and, naturally a triangle form that reaches a dramatic climax in the deary setting of Siberia.

Grant Withers gives splendid support as the star's leading man.

CHATTERTON RETURNS TO LOCAL HOUSE

Ruth Chatterton has been "Madame X," "The Laughing Lady," and the Sarah of "Sarah and Son."

As "Anybody's Woman," which comes to the Fox West Coast theater on Monday, next for three days, she is co-starred with Clive Brook in a play that is redolent of realism, a play that is drenched with daring drama.

"Anybody's Woman" is the story of the vagrancies of a misfit marriage. Brook plays a wealthy and cultured young lawyer, who, disappointed by the faithlessness of the wife who has just divorced him, goes on a prolonged binge in the metropolis.

At a cheap theatrical hotel he meets Ruth Chatterton, a broken-down show girl. During the progress of a wild party in which Brook is insensibly drunk, practical-joker companions manage to have Brook and Ruth married.

FIVE BIG ACTS VAUDEVILLE AT SHELLEY HOUSE

Again, tonight, Shelly's Third and Bush street theatre presents five acts of headline vaudeville augmenting the regular picture program.

Tonight's bill of "in person" acts promises to be even better than any seen at the Shelley house for the past several weeks and consists of: the comedy team of English and Parker, a big time act, the ever funny Bert Ferris, Paul and Irene, a classy and plenty fast dancing act, Jack Rose the popular character songster, and The Douglas Duo, a musical novelty act.

On the silversheet, for tonight only, will be seen a rip-roaring western picture starring Jack Perrin with Starlight, the wonder horse of the screen and, Rex the movie Collie. The name of the picture is, "The Code of the Range" and it is all and more than can be expected of a fast action "horse opera."

Also on the screen will be the regular two reel comedy, a new news reel, a cartoon and a one reel novelty.

'NEW MORALS' TO BE NEXT POWELL FILM

"New Morals," from the pen of Frederick Lonsdale,author of numerous successes of the theater, will serve as William Powell's next starring film vehicle, it is announced by Jesse L. Laskey, first vice president of Paramount Publix in charge of production. 'New Morals" is to be directed by John Cromwell, who now is directing the filmization of Mark Twain's immortal boy story "Tom Sawyer."

Powell's most recent starring vehicle was "For the Defense," following the completion of which he started on a vacation tour of Europe with Ronald Colman and Percy Marmont.

The story of "New Morals" is set in the background of sophisticated society, Powell having the role of a man-about-town who causes a serious break in the married life of a successful author and his wife.

NOODLES FAGAN AT WEST COAST ON SATURDAY

Several acts of high class vaudeville are seen at the Fox West Coast theater Saturday and Sunday, in connection with the regular feature picture, "So This is London," starring Will Rogers.

Noodles Fagan, one of the best masters of ceremonies yet to come to Santa Ana and who had charge of the recent fashion show at the Fox Broadway theater, will be in charge of the vaudeville acts.

The acts, all from Fanchon and Marco, include the Wrangler Four, a quartet which has been heard here several times which "go over" in Santa Ana in a big way; Marjorie and Dorothy in a song and dance act; Charles and Lee Fargo, in a music and comedy act and Laddie and Gardner in a comedy act that is said to be particularly

The Rogers film, which was held over in Santa Ana two days because of public demand is expected to play to full houses.

Airplanes Will Introduce New Picture to S. A.

The introduction of "The Dawn Patrol," Richard Barthelmess' latest all-talking picture, to Santa Ana theater goers will be rather auspicious, according to an announcement made today by Francis Glaab, manager of the Fox Broadway theater.

Eddie Martin and his squad of planes, eight in number, will herald the coming of the picture to Santa Ana by flying over the theater Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, in a series of fancy dips and turns, was announced.

The new picture is the first aerial picture that Barthelmess has made and is said to be one of the greatest air films produced.

RALPH FORBES TO BE BOW'S LEADING MAN

Ralph Forbes will be the leading man in Clara Bow's next Paramount starring picture, "Her Wedding Night."

"Her Wedding Night" will be Forbes' first part in a Paramount picture since his memorable role in "Beau Geste" four years ago.

"Good News" Now Playing At Broadway

Trenches, roller-coaster tracks and monorails provided means by which unusual action scenes of a football struggle were obtained for the filmization of "Good News," now playing at the Fox Broadway theater as a new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer offering.

"Good News", as it comes to the screen, brings such spectacular scenes as these, which were only suggested by off-stage cheering and dialogue in the original stage play. The canoeing love scenes on the moonlit lake also are welcome changes from the stilted theater action.

JACK OAKIE NOT TO RETURN TO STAGE

Jack Oakie, Paramount comedy star, is not planning to return to the stage this year, it is announced by B. P. Schulberg, general manager of west coast production for the film company. This denial follows the publication in New York of a rumor to the effect that Oakie will be starred in the new edition of Ziegfeld's "Follies." The production schedule at the Hollywood studios will keep Oakie busy for several months to come.

FORBES IN LEAD

Ralph Forbes, whose last previous Paramount picture was "Beau Geste," is Clara Bow's leading man in "Her Wedding Night," a farce now being directed by Frank Tuttle.

COOPER AS LEGIONNAIRE

Gary Cooper takes the part of an American private in the French Foreign Legion in "Morocco," which Josef von Sternberg is directing for Paramount.

English Star Signs For Lubisch Film

Just as Paramount went to Paris to secure Chevalier, France's greatest entertainer, for the talking screen, so has it gone to London for the reigning musical comedy star of England.

Jack Buchanan, for many seasons the favorite song and dance star of the British stage, is now in Hollywood playing the featured lead with Jeanette MacDonald in Ernst Lubitsch's new comedy, "Monte Carlo."

Buchanan made his first real bid for footlight fame when he created the role of "Battling Butler" in the musical show of that name and which he himself produced. His fame increased when he played with Beatrice Lillie and Gertrude Lawrence in the first of the Charlot Revues, in which he made his American debut in 1924.

"HOT CURVES" WILL END RUN TONIGHT

Lest anyone be deceived, "Hot Curves," the Tiffany all-talking production to be shown today at Walker's State theatre is not a sex picture. It is a baseball story, and the curves referred to are arcs described by a horsehide pill circumnavigating the atmosphere at the instigation of a twirler's paw, motivated by a technique calculated to deceive the guy with the bat—and that's that.

"Hot Curves" is scheduled to provide comedy, drama and romance, and it has Benny Rubin and Pert Kelton to supply the laughs and Rex Lease and Alice Day to uphold the romantic end. For the right baseball atmosphere there is Mike Donlin, one of the world's greatest stars of the diamond, and to complete an excellent cast are Natalie Moorhead, Mary Carr, John Ince and Paul Hurst.

AUTUMN DAYS PROMISE MANY WIDELY VARIED SOCIAL EVENTS

Though late summer days still linger, a note of early fall is seen in the rich and brilliant tones of the gorgeous blossoms used by hostesses in the many smart events of the past week. Bridge luncheons have been exceedingly popular affairs for the long and pleasant afternoons, and several lovely weddings have been important events of the week. Showers for fall brides have been numerous and during the coming season many and colorful affairs have been planned for brides-to-be. Those who have spent leisurely days at the beaches are preparing to bid a reluctant farewell to the long stretches of grey sand and the blue seas, before returning to their homes to prepare for a socially busy fall.

For Brides-To-Be

Miss Mazie Kirby, lovely Anaheim girl who was wed to Allen Pryor in Los Angeles yesterday, was the incentive for a delightfully arranged shower the first of the week when Mrs. Roy Lyon was hostess to a group of friends in her home on Panorama Heights. Bridge was played and the honoree was presented with an array of handsome gifts. The following evening Miss Florence McQueen entertained in her home here with a bridge and shower in honor of Miss Kirby who again was the recipient of many gifts. Miss June Beshears of Anaheim was co-hostess with Miss McQueen.

Miss Doris Scofield, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Scofield, whose marriage to James Day of Orange, will be an event of September, has been the incentive for numerous pretty affairs since the announcement of her engagement. Recently Mrs. Gordon Kneeland of Compton and Mrs. C. F. Rhoades were co-hostesses at a shower for her in the home of the latter. Daintily appointed tables were centered with umbrellas in gay tones.

Another bride-to-be for whom many affairs have been given is Miss Marie Rudolph, who is to become the bride of Albert Muckenthaler, September 22. Miss Sophie Ehlen of Orange entertained recently for Miss Rudolph when a mock wedding and an evening of bridge were enjoyable features of the affair. Miss Rudolph received many lovely gifts.

Church Wedding

An interesting wedding of the week was that of Miss Dorothy Haynes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carey Haynes, and Norman Hicks, son of Mrs. Florence Hicks. The Rev. Perry Schrock read the service and the wedding took place in the First Congregational church before a flower-banked altar. The young people will establish their home in this city.

In Los Angeles

The Wee Kirk o' the Heather was the setting for a lovely wedding this week when Miss Marguerite Reinert, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Reinert of Los Angeles, became the bride of Malcolm H. Finley, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Finley of this city. The bride's sister, Miss Edith Reinert was bridesmaid and Rhodes Finley, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

Quiet Wedding

A quiet wedding of the week was that of Sunday morning when Mrs. Jean Jessuium, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. T. Charles, was married to Dale Thomas of Long Beach. Following the ceremony the newlyweds left for the north where they will spend their honeymoon.

Morning Wedding

A morning medding this week at the Wee Kirk o' the Heather, united in marriage Miss Freda Young, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Snyder of Los Angeles, and Clarence B. Pool, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence B. Pool of this city. The Rev. Norman B. Henderson, pastor of the First Congregational church of Fresno, officiated. A wedding breakfast was given in the home of Mr. Pool's parents on West Fifth street. The young couple will live in Hollywood.

Wed At Whittier

The First Baptist church of Whittier was chosen by Miss Lucille Morgan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Morgan of 2033 Greenleaf street, as the setting for her marriage to H. E. McCullough, son of Mr. and Mrs. John McCullough of Garden Grove. The young couple will reside in Los Angeles on their return from a honeymoon in the north.

Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Pritchard celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary this week when a dinner was planned in their honor by their daughter, Miss Charlotte Pritchard. Because tall and lovely stalks of golden rod were used in the decorations on her parents' wedding day, Miss Pritchard chose these flowers to carry out an attractive decorative scheme.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Mitchell and Mr. and Mrs. Keith Stowe joined recently in celebrating their tenth wedding anniversaries. Dinner was served in the Stowe garden and afterward the group went indoors for the evening of bridge. A pink and white motif was carried out in the decorations.

Dr. and Mrs. George H. Randell who live on the road to Irvine park, entertained friends this week with a dinner at the park. The affair was planned by Miss Laura Randell, in honor of her parents' fiftieth wedding anniversary.

Club Affairs

Mrs. J. R. Medlock entertained members of the second section of Ebell at her beach cottage at Newport this week. Summer vacations were reviewed by members.

Mrs. Frank J. Was was hostess to members of the Quill Pen club this week at a dinner given in the Was gardens. When darkness fell candles on the long tables were lighted and the dessert course was served by their soft glow. The regular meeting of the club followed the dinner.

Mrs. Frank Lansdown was hostess to members of the Amistad club in her home, 325 Grant street, recently when she carried out an especially attractive motif in serving luncheon. Games and a social hour were enjoyed in the afternoon.

Mrs. Fred Towner was a gracious hostess this week when she opened her lovely home at 1138 West Fifth street to members of the Toroso Rebekah lodge and their friends this week. Co-hostesses with Mrs. Towner were Mrs. Charles Carey and Mrs. Edna Kinsella. Both 500 and bridge were played.

The J. J. Vernon home on Santiago avenue was the setting for a delightfully arranged party this week when Mrs. Carl Pister was co-hostess with Mrs. Vernon in entertaining members of the Chat and Sew club. After a pleasant evening a delectable refreshment course was served.

Members of the Business and Professional Women's club enjoyed talks by returned traveler members at their meeting this week. A letter from Miss Lulu B. Finley, who is traveling in Europe was read by Mrs. Minnie Mayhill. Other talks were given by Mrs. Wilbur Schopfle, Miss Harriet Whidden who was in the north with Miss Lulu Ott, and Miss Anna Karlson who traveled to Hawaii with Miss Damaris Bean.

Unusual Surprise Shower Is Interesting and Entertaining Event

Honoring Miss Doris Scofield, with a surprise shower, members of the Standard Bearers group of the First Methodist church were bidden to the home of Mrs. W. D. Finn, 1224 French street, yesterday afternoon, where Mrs. Finn and Miss Dorothy Grizzle were co-hostesses to the group.

The afternoon passed all too quickly with a clever variety of games. Prizes were awarded Miss Ramona Smith, first; and Miss Betty Howell, consolation, on the essay, "My Idea of an Ideal Husband." For poems spelling the honoree's name, prizes were awarded Miss Katherine Henderson, and Miss Betty Walker.

A mock wedding was perhaps one of the cleverest features of the afternoon, in which Miss Betty Walker portrayed the part of the bride, Miss Ruth Beemer acted the part of the bridegroom, Miss Betty Howell, the minister, and Miss Katherine Henderson, the rejected suitor.

Following games, the group adjourned to the dining room, where a table, prettily decorated with a miniature bride and bridegroom at one end, and rainbow streamers leading to a pot of gold at the other was most inviting. Favors were tiny pink net parcels of rice, tied with a pink bow, and bearing a card on which was inscribed the names, Doris Schofield and James Day. The wedding of the young couple will take place in early fall.

After the daintiest of refreshments were served, the honoree was presented with a lovely blue cracker and cheese set, inlaid with gold.

Those present in addition to the honoree, Miss Doris Schofield, were her mother, Mrs. S. J. Schofield, and the Misses Ruth Beemer, Betty Howell, Betty Walker, Ramona Smith, Marylinda Taylor, Ruth Julien, Katherine Henderson, Hazel Stukey and the co-hostesses, Miss Dorothy Grizzle, and Mrs. W. D. Finn.

Young People Are Dinner Guests of Sisters Recently

Young people of the city have been enjoying many lovely dinner parties this summer, one of the most recent of which was given by the Misses Edna May and Marguerite Echols, interesting daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Echols, in their home at 1417 West Ninth street. Table appointments were very attractive and centered around a bouquet of brilliant marigolds.

Following the delectable menu course, the party adjourned to the Nazarene church, where they attended the Young People's meeting.

Those sharing the hospitality of the Misses Edna May and Marguerite Echols, and their brother, Leonard Echols, were the Misses Erma Baxter, and Evelyn Harding, of this city, Miss Pauline Lindsey, of Orange, Miss Clara Bennett, of Garden Grove, Mr. and Mrs. George Huffman, of this city, Mendal Taylor, of Brea, Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Taylor, of Brea, and Messrs. Whitcomb Hardy, Morris Gilmore and William Gilbert of this city.

Miss Roehm Is Hostess At Bridge Party for Charming Visitor

When Miss Margaret Heiss leaves tomorrow evening for her home in Salt Lake City, she will take with her memories of a very pleasant summer spent with Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Heiss, 530 North McClay street, and of a delightful party of last evening, when Miss Elizabeth Roehm entertained in the Tustin home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elon Roehm, honoring Miss Heiss and her brother, Eugene ("Bud") Heiss. The interesting brother and sister have spent numerous vacations here during the past four years, and Eugene has become so pleasantly impressed with Santa Ana that he will remain here for the winter, attending the local high school.

The charming home of the Roehms was enhanced by the lavish use of snowy white asters used in bouquets throughout the rooms. Court whist was the diversion of the evening, and prize awards were given Miss Cleo West and Wylie Carlyle as holders of high scores. Ana appetizing refreshment course concluded the pleasant hours.

ANN MEREDITH'S MIXING BOWL

Cookies, crisp and hot, are just about the best thing you can serve in sweets when you don't want to take the time to bake a nice cake or make a pie.

The possessors of mechanical refrigerators can have them on tap all the time just for the trouble of mixing the dough once every week or 10 days. Keep the roll in the ice box, slice off and bake as needed. I think you will like these delectable confections called

ICEBOX PINWHEELS

1 cup butter
2 cups brown sugar
2 eggs, well beaten
3½ cups sifted flour
1 scant teaspoon baking powder
1-3 teaspoon soda
1-2 teaspoon salt
1-2 cup finely chopped pecans
1-3 cup powdered chocolate

Cream the butter until light, add the sugar and beaten eggs and beat well. Sift three cups of the flour with salt, soda and baking powder and work two-thirds of it into the butter mixture. Divide the mixture evenly, to one part add the finely chopped nuts, to the other part add the powdered chocolate. To both parts add enough of the remaining flour to make the dough stiff enough to handle and roll.

Roll out both parts as evenly as possible in size, lift the chocolate sheet onto the light sheet and roll up (the roll should be about 2½ inches in diameter). Put the roll in the refrigerator, wrapped in waxed paper to keep its shape. When you want fresh cookies just cut thin slices off the roll and bake in a quick oven.

TODAY'S RECIPE

3 pounds spinach
1-2 cup very thick cream sauce
Pinch of nutmeg to season
1 onion, minced and sauted
1 cup fine cracker crumbs
2 eggs, whites beaten separately
1 cup blanched peanuts, ground
Salt and pepper

Cook the spinach in the water held by the leaves when it is lifted from the rinsing water. Chop it fine and dress with the thick cream sauce. Shake the can of nutmeg over it two or three times, stir and combine with the sauted minced onion.

Beat the egg yolks to a froth, stir into the spinach together with the dry crumbs and the peanuts, run through the coarse knife of the food chopper. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites, pile the mixture into a buttered baking dish, smooth off the top, and bake in a medium oven 30 minutes. The dish should be fairly shallow so that the loaf will bake evenly.

This nut loaf takes the place of meat. The eggs and nuts supply the necessary protein, the spinach the bulk and vitamin, the sauce and crumbs the energy units. The loaf will serve four and the calories total about 1600.

SANTA ANA BLOSSOM GAINS HEIGHT OF ITS AMBITION

BY VIRGINIA VIAU

Bang! It was a shot! And while the plant realm on West Second street was yet recuperating from the shock, Miss Wallflower dahlia, grown by Mrs. E. G. Best, began her shooting career and accomplished the unusual by growing to a height of nine feet.

For almost four years now her bulbs have remained in the same monotonous spot at 1632 West Second street, with not even a summer vacation. Although she was cared for tenderly by Mrs. Best, she was not coddled and given a new underground apartment as were her sister dahlias with the advent of each year. Her patience was exhausted. Prompted by a desire to gain prominence as well as to see more of the world, she made her debut with a bang.

One shot was followed by another, until they became as regular as the lattice work on the fence. Assisted by the sun, who now beamed on her with added significance, she continued her shooting, and grouped her three outgrowing branches gracefully. The fruit of her labors, now, huge, red dahlias, rich and shapely were clustered in an unique arrangement. Her leaves were a healthy green, and thrifty, too. Truly, her efforts were well rewarded, for when her career was at its zenith, she had reached a height of more than nine feet. At her once admired sisters, she nodded aloofly, fully aware that they formed the background for her—a huge and brilliant bouquet.

It must be admitted, however, that Miss Wallflower's career was inspired by a distant relative, who recently attained to a height of seven feet and was considered one of the most marvelous products of Mrs. Best's garden.

MUSIC-LITERATURE-ART

OSCAR STRAUS

By RUTH ANDREWS

Coming back to our present-day Hollywood, that near-by city of glamour and make-believe where romance and fantasy flourish, one may find many a fascinating musical personality dwelling here, lured by the current vogue of the sound-film. One of the most interesting of these is Oscar Straus, Viennese exponent of operetta, who recently arrived in Los Angeles, where he is now actively engaged in composing for Warner Bros.

With his Viennese contemporaries Lehar and Fall, Oscar Straus has won special distinction throughout Europe and the United States during the past generation in the field of light opera, in which he has produced his best, most characteristic work. Best known, perhaps, in his melodious masterpiece, "The Chocolate Soldier," strains from which are familiar everywhere. Who has not thrilled to the romantic call of "My Hero," with its alluring "Come, come, I love you only," taken from this pleasing work, and widely popularized by the rank and file.

Straus was born in Vienna April 6, 1870, and received his first musical training in that famous Old-world center of art from Gradnener, an Austrian teacher of eminence. Later, during a period spent in Berlin, he had the good fortune to study with Max Brush, famous German composer and musical authority, profiting much from this valuable experience.

Although he had already begun to compose considerably, Straus first laurels were won in the role of orchestral conductor. By the time he was 25, he was conducting in various provincial theatres throughout the former German empire, his work in this capacity even taking him to Berlin.

About this time Straus married a young violinist, and was inspired to further composition, composing his first operetta, "The Merry Nibelungs," which was finally produced in Berlin in 1905.

During his earlier period as a composer, Straus planned to create work of serious symphonic type, and while working in this vein, completed an orchestral work, "Der Traum ein Lebin," a serenade for strings, and a sonata for violin.

Domestic friction was soon to change the whole current of Straus' life. With the breaking up of his first matrimonial venture, Straus plunged for a time into the gaieties of cafe life, to drive dull care away. He joined a group of writers, artists, musicians, and theatrical people who gathered together at a unique cabaret, the "Uberbrettl," founded by a Baron Wolzogen, where merriment and gay bohemianism reigned supreme. Straus soon became chief conductor and composer for the group, and wrote many musical numbers for the stage pieces written by the dramatists who gathered there.

The gaiety and glamour of this environment soon left its imprint upon Straus' creative genius, and he was soon writing graceful waltzes, Viennese in style, followed by numerous appealing operettas, which rapidly won for him the acclaim of laughter-loving Vienna. Some of these include "The Valley of Love," "The Beautiful Unknown," "A Waltz Dream" (his best work, written in 1907), the very popular "Chocolate Soldier," composed the following year, "The Last Waltz," "The Spell of Love," "The Foolish Maiden," "Naughty Riquette" and others of similar nature, of which romance, the love of man and woman, always forms the chief theme.

Straus' somewhat recent marriage to Clara Singer, his present wife, has been happy. He has two sons, both possessing decidedly artistic tendencies.

Even though Straus is now writing for the sound films in Hollywood, this is not the type of work he really enjoys, because of its "made to order" nature. He is even not especially keen about the science of film-making, and is not very favorable in his attitude toward American "jazz," which he thinks will pass eventually.

LOS ANGELES FALL OPERA

Elaborate plans are being made for the effective presentation of Los Angeles' annual fall season of opera, which will open September 29, and continue to October 13. During that period the Los Angeles Grand Opera association will stage ten productions at Shrine Auditorium, including one double bill. One of the most interesting seasons that the association has ever presented is anticipated.

General Director Merola has secured the leading Metropolitan Opera stars, also three European favorites, who will make their American debuts during the local season, Clare Clairbert, Gaetano Viviani, and Sidney Rayner.

Others of the casts will include Gigli, Jeritza, Hope Hampton, Queena Mario, Pinza, John Charles Thomas, Frederick Jagel, Dorothee Manski, and Elinor Marlo. The repertoire will include "La Boheme," "Tannhauser," "La Traviata," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Hansel and Gretel," "Manon," "Salome," "Mignon," "Girl of the Golden West," and "Lucia."

Chorus rehearsals have been under way since May 15, under the direction of Dr. Karl Riedel of Metropolitan Opera of New York. Serge Oukrainsky will have charge of ballet work, while Armando Agnini, stage manager of the Metropolitan is supervising work on the stage settings. He has arranged for new sets for practically all of the operas at a cost of $150,000.

It will be of special interest to note that "Tannhauser" will be presented in an impressionistic manner; "Salome" will have a modern setting; and "Girl of the Golden West" will have a true Western ranchouse for a background.

The orchestra will be composed of the Los Angeles Philharmonic personnel, and will be directed by five nationally known conductors, Tino Merola, Wilfred Pelletier, and Dr. Karl Diedel, of the Metropolitan Opera; Pietro Cimini, formerly of the Chicago Opera, now prominent in Los Angeles musical circles, and Dr. Artur Rodzinski, director of the Los Angeles Philharmonic orchestra.

WITH THE ARTISTS

Louise Caselotti in Films

During the past week Louise Caselotti, Los Angeles mezzo soprano, who is well known locally, where she appeared during Santa Ana's music week festival two seasons past, has been singing a "Carmen" number at the Tivoli theater in San Francisco, in the prologue of the picture, "Sei tu l'amore" in which she is featured for the run of the picture ,which opened August 16. Miss Caselotti's work has met with sensational favor.

The picture in which she appears was filmed at the Italotone, in Hollywood, and is the first Italian talkie completed here. It has been sent to Italy, and will be shown in Rome before the King of Italy and Mussolini.

Miss Caselotti, besides assuming the leading role in the film production, has an opportunity to display her unusually rich voice in three outstanding songs. She has studied exclusively with her father, Guido Caselotti, prominent opera coach of Los Angeles, who also has many friends here in Santa Ana.

Mme. Maria Caselotti, internationally noted opera singer, who is well known both in Europe and the United States, who is also settled in Los Angeles at present, following extensive tours in Europe and Cuba, and who has appeared twice locally at the time of the production of "Traviata" here last November, and during the current band concert series, is the mother of Miss Caselotti.

Hempel in Europe

Frieda Hempel sailed recently for Europe, where she will sing in Paris, Ostende and Vienna. Upon her return to the United States, during the fall months, she will make an extensive concert tour, in addition to radio, picture work and stage appearances.

Yehudi in Switzerland

Yehudi Menuhin, gifted young Jewish-American violinist, is making a sojourn of several months in Switzerland, with his father.

BOOK REVIEWS

By MARY BURKE KING

All in The Racket, by William E. Weeks, a Charles Boni Paper book.

"All in the Racket" is a problem novel. Arthur Garfield Hays has a dissertation on the problem by way of introduction to the story.

The story is a criticism of our legal system and a challenge to those who are confident that the safeguards of criminal law prevent the conviction of innocent men" a conclusion wrongly derived from the difficulty of convicting guilty men."

Mr. Mays is right in assuming that many of us have felt that the rights of the victims of the anti-social individuals were disregarded in the effort to safeguard the criminal from injustice.

"All in the Racket" is a quickly read story, as enthralling as a detective story, of a gangster who is convicted of a murder which he did not commit. So determined are the police that a bad man shall be punished, and this gangster Paul Sella is a bad man, that they plant a bit of evidence, and influence a few witnesses in order to obtain the conviction of Sella. So Sella is sent to his death though Sella was not guilty.

It was horrible injustice that Sella was sent to jail. The book is an argument against capital punishment. Even to the minds of one who is influenced by Mr. Hays humanitarianism, is not wholly convinced by the argument.

Undoubtedly Mr. Hays does not regard the problem of the book as an isolated case, else he would not emphasize it as one of the faults of legal procedure. The situation is a matter of informing the public, not of arousing sentiment. "Framing" a criminal would not be condoned by anyone who was thinking straight. On the other had, such a story as this should not cause us to go off on a tangent and make it easier for criminals to escape punishment for their crime. We must think of the innocent man who suffered at the hands of the criminal before and when he was apprehended and bend effort to punish the right man.

The story itself is a "whiz."

This is a most remarkable little brochure. A little pink booklet of information on travel in Europe presented in the most concise manner imaginable. Its forty-eight pages contains comprehensive information on the "Grand Tour." The Rambling pedestrian spent eighteen months in Europe, in England, France, Switzerland, Spain, Italy, Austria, Germany, Holland, and Belgium. With the exception of Australia and Holland and Belgium at least a month was spent in each country with visits to small places as well as large. The names of the hotels and pensions are given and the outstanding point of interest of each place, population of town and several references to books which it is useful to have read before visiting the respective countries.

Not the least, and possibly the most interesting phase of the book is the table of expenses. It will bolster the hopes of those who sometimes become discouraged saving nickles and quarters for a trip to Europe. Three and a half months expenses in England, including transportation, for two people came to only $564.92. France, including Normandy, Britany the Chateau county and the Riveira, two and a half months for two people came to $379.30.

A surprising number of good suggestions fo rthe traveler are made in addition to the familiar advise to limit the amount of baggage as much as possible. He recommends day time travel and slow trains, the better to see the country. One can't carry much of a library about Europe and at the same time limit the baggage, guide and informative books with the largest amount of information presented in the most concise manner are the most useful. This one can be carried in the vest pocket without bulking and it has quite a complete little map.

Science and The New Civilization by Dr. Robert A. Millikan, published by Charles Scribner's Sons.

"Science and The New Civilization" will never be a popular book, meaning that it will be read by everybody. But the person who wants to do a bit of serious reading and discover somewhat of the meaning of the progress of science and the one-sided conflict which some good people are waging between science and civilization would do well to devote time to this book. It is not 200 pages in extent. It compresses several articles by Dr. Millikan which have appeared in The Atlantic Monthly, The Forum, Science, and Scribner's Magazine, and other material. The first few chapters treat mechanical and scientific progress in a philosophical and logical manner akin to that of Pupini in "The Romance of the Machine" which was published only a short time ago.

But Dr. Millikan then delves into the developments in science and illustrates his point that every new discovery of science takes its place in the background with all that has been discovered and evolved before which progress is made. The re-orientation must include those truths which have been discovered before. In this science points the way for the human attitude toward the scientific age. Man in his grasp after the new has discarded the past. He has not governed his actions and formulated his morals with an awareness of the truths of the past. Dr. Millikan concedes that there is one "regrettable tendency in modern life for which science is probably to some extent at least responsible. I refer to the craze for the new regardless of the true, to the demand for change for the sake of change, without reference to the consequences, to the present-day widespread worship of the bizarre, to the cheap extravagance and sensationalism that surround us on every side. . . . The spirit of change has been caught where its basis has been wanting."

A chapter on "Michelson's Economic Value" will prove particularly interesting because of the proximity of a portion of Dr. Michelson's experiment.

This book is the story of the propaganda which preceded and was maintained during the World war. Mr. Viereck defines propaganda so that we have basis for the circumstances to be discussed. "Propaganda," he says, "is a campaign camouflaging its orgin, its motive, or both, conducted for the purpose of obtaining a specific objective by manipulating public opinion."

The author was the editor of "The Fatherland." His father was a naturalized American, his mother was a native of California. His mother's father, he says, traveled west in a covered wagon in 1843, was captured by Indians, and, after thrilling adventures, finally reached San Francisco. He treats of German and British propaganda as it was spread in America. The book is quite dispassionate. Not long ago some of the material contained in the book appeared in The Saturday Evening Post. It was written in the third person with the identity of the author concealed. The articles are incorporated in this book and while it is not written in the third person throughout, the author successfully maintains the same degree of detachment and good temper.

He does not stoop to piling up detail of this piece of propaganda and that it is in that method that the danger would lie of arousing temper. Personalities of propagandists are revealed. The identity of those who manipulated public opinion is revealed.

Other books have been written on the subject. I do not recall having read anything on the subject in addition to the Saturday Evening Post articles already referred to. This book seems very comprehensive and very necessary. The author near the close of his book says that there is "no infallible safeguard against propaganda," save possibly the serum of horse sense and humor. The reading of the book should develop that horse sense which should enable us to keep our heads if another war comes with its inevitable propaganda.

"It is imposisble," says Mr. Vierick, "to conduct war without emotional disturbance." Propaganda performs the same service as the war dance of the Indians before they went on the war path. It would be a sorry war if we didn't hate our enemies. We must be made to hate and "Spreading Germans of Hate" impresses us with what an important business the spreading of propaganda is. Sir William Wiseman who is intimately introduced in the book, influential head of the British Secret Service in the United States during critical years one time said that he was "afraid the American people swallowed an overdose of propaganda" and that "the amount they consumed was far beyond" his prescription.

The reader who may be surprised at the extent of the propaganda machine during the time of which this book treats would do well to bear in mind that propagandists are busily engaged though not as fatally engaged at the present time. They are not spreading hatred between nations but they are influencing our economic, social and political life and editors realize it better than any other group of people.

Book Notes....

Clarie Blake, whose first novel, "Sky Farm," was published August 8th, is assistant librarian in a Jersey town on the Palisades across the Hudson from Grant's Tomb. A short story of hers, "The Mold," was three-starred by Edward J. O'Brien several years ago, and was included in one of the annual O. Henry collections. This scene of "Sky Farm" is laid in western Connecticut, where Miss Blake has spent many summers with her family in an old farmhouse built 175 years ago. "The house," she says, "expressed for me the spirit of the mountain. It is stout and whole; its ceilings are low, and its timbers rough. Originally it hadn't a nail in it. Its chimney breast nearly covered one side of the old kitchen, and a six-foot man can go head first into the Dutch oven, turn around with ease, and come out again head first. I know because I wanted to find out so I said he couldn't so he did."

Containing recent revisions by the author, a new edition of Maurice Guest, by Henry Handel Richardson, will be published August 28, by W. W. Norton & Co., Inc. This is the first of Miss Richardson's novels and—in spite of Ultima Thule—is considered by many her best. Utterly different from the Richard Mahony trilogy, Maurice Guest, describing life among musicians in Leipzig, tells the story of a young man's love.

The Leipzig colony was familiar to Miss Richardson. As a girl, she left Australia to study music in Germany. After three years of study, realizing that she could never equal the brilliant foreigners about her, she gave up music as a career, settled in London and devoted herself to writing.

ANN MEREDITH'S MIXING BOWL

Cookies, crisp and hot, are just about the best thing you can serve in sweets when you don't want to take the time to bake a nice cake or make a pie.

The possessors of mechanical refrigerators can have them on tap all the time just for the trouble of mixing the dough once every week or 10 days. Keep the roll in the ice box, slice off and bake as needed. I think you will like these delectable confections called

1 cup butter
2 cups brown sugar
2 eggs, well beaten
3½ cups sifted flour
1 scant teaspoon baking powder
1-3 teaspoon soda
1-2 teaspoon salt
1-2 cup finely chopped pecans
1-3 cup powdered chocolate

Cream the butter until light, add the sugar and beaten eggs and beat well. Sift three cups of the flour with salt, soda and baking powder and work two-thirds of it into the butter mixture. Divide the mixture evenly, to one part add the finely chopped nuts, to the other part add the powdered chocolate. To both parts add enough of the remaining flour to make the dough stiff enough to handle and roll.

Roll out both parts as evenly as possible in size, lift the chocolate sheet onto the light sheet and roll up (the roll should be about 2½ inches in diameter). Put the roll in the refrigerator, wrapped in waxed paper to keep its shape. When you want fresh cookies just cut thin slices off the roll and bake in a quick oven.

1 cup fine cracker crumbs
2 eggs, whites beaten separately
1 cup blanched peanuts, ground
Salt and pepper

Cook the spinach in the water held by the leaves when it is lifted from the rinsing water. Chop it fine and dress with the thick cream sauce. Shake the can of nutmeg over it two or three times, stir and combine with the sauted minced onion.

Beat the egg yolks to a froth, stir into the spinach together with the dry crumbs and the peanuts, run through the coarse knife of the food chopper. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites, pile the mixture into a buttered baking dish, smooth off the top, and bake in a medium oven 30 minutes. The dish should be fairly shallow so that the loaf will bake evenly.

This nut loaf takes the place of meat. The eggs and nuts supply the necessary protein, the spinach the bulk and vitamin, the sauce and crumbs the energy units. The loaf will serve four and the calories total about 1600.

SANTA ANA BLOSSOM GAINS HEIGHT OF ITS AMBITION

BY VIRGINIA VIAU

Bang! It was a shot! And while the plant realm on West Second street was yet recuperating from the shock, Miss Wallflower dahlia, grown by Mrs. E. G. Best, began her shooting career and accomplished the unusual by growing to a height of nine feet.

For almost four years now her bulbs have remained in the same monotonous spot at 1632 West Second street, with not even a summer vacation. Although she was cared for tenderly by Mrs. Best, she was not coddled and given a new underground apartment as were her sister dahlias with the advent of each year. Her patience was exhausted. Prompted by a desire to gain prominence as well as to see more of the world, she made her debut with a bang.

One shot was followed by another, until they became as regular as the lattice work on the fence. Assisted by the sun, who now beamed on her with added significance, she continued her shooting, and grouped her three outgrowing branches gracefully. The fruit of her labors, now, huge, red dahlias, rich and shapely were clustered in an unique arrangement. Her leaves were a healthy green, and thrifty, too. Truly, her efforts were well rewarded, for when her career was at its zenith, she had reached a height of more than nine feet. At her once admired sisters, she nodded aloofly, fully aware that they formed the background for her—a huge and brilliant bouquet.

It must be admitted, however, that Miss Wallflower's career was inspired by a distant relative, who recently attained to a height of seven feet and was considered one of the most marvelous products of Mrs. Best's garden.

OSCAR STRAUS

By RUTH ANDREWS

Coming back to our present-day Hollywood, that near-by city of glamour and make-believe where romance and fantasy flourish, one may find many a fascinating musical personality dwelling here, lured by the current vogue of the sound-film. One of the most interesting of these is Oscar Straus, Viennese exponent of operetta, who recently arrived in Los Angeles, where he is now actively engaged in composing for Warner Bros.

With his Viennese contemporaries Lehar and Fall, Oscar Straus has won special distinction throughout Europe and the United States during the past generation in the field of light opera, in which he has produced his best, most characteristic work. Best known, perhaps, in his melodious masterpiece, "The Chocolate Soldier," strains from which are familiar everywhere. Who has not thrilled to the romantic call of "My Hero," with its alluring "Come, come, I love you only," taken from this pleasing work, and widely popularized by the rank and file.

Straus was born in Vienna April 6, 1870, and received his first musical training in that famous Old-world center of art from Gradnener, an Austrian teacher of eminence. Later, during a period spent in Berlin, he had the good fortune to study with Max Brush, famous German composer and musical authority, profiting much from this valuable experience.

Although he had already begun to compose considerably, Straus first laurels were won in the role of orchestral conductor. By the time he was 25, he was conducting in various provincial theatres throughout the former German empire, his work in this capacity even taking him to Berlin.

About this time Straus married a young violinist, and was inspired to further composition, composing his first operetta, "The Merry Nibelungs," which was finally produced in Berlin in 1905.

During his earlier period as a composer, Straus planned to create work of serious symphonic type, and while working in this vein, completed an orchestral work, "Der Traum ein Lebin," a serenade for strings, and a sonata for violin.

Domestic friction was soon to change the whole current of Straus' life. With the breaking up of his first matrimonial venture, Straus plunged for a time into the gaieties of cafe life, to drive dull care away. He joined a group of writers, artists, musicians, and theatrical people who gathered together at a unique cabaret, the "Uberbrettl," founded by a Baron Wolzogen, where merriment and gay bohemianism reigned supreme. Straus soon became chief conductor and composer for the group, and wrote many musical numbers for the stage pieces written by the dramatists who gathered there.

The gaiety and glamour of this environment soon left its imprint upon Straus' creative genius, and he was soon writing graceful waltzes, Viennese in style, followed by numerous appealing operettas, which rapidly won for him the acclaim of laughter-loving Vienna. Some of these include "The Valley of Love," "The Beautiful Unknown," "A Waltz Dream" (his best work, written in 1907), the very popular "Chocolate Soldier," composed the following year, "The Last Waltz," "The Spell of Love," "The Foolish Maiden," "Naughty Riquette" and others of similar nature, of which romance, the love of man and woman, always forms the chief theme.

Straus' somewhat recent marriage to Clara Singer, his present wife, has been happy. He has two sons, both possessing decidedly artistic tendencies.

Even though Straus is now writing for the sound films in Hollywood, this is not the type of work he really enjoys, because of its "made to order" nature. He is even not especially keen about the science of film-making, and is not very favorable in his attitude toward American "jazz," which he thinks will pass eventually.

LOS ANGELES FALL OPERA

Elaborate plans are being made for the effective presentation of Los Angeles' annual fall season of opera, which will open September 29, and continue to October 13. During that period the Los Angeles Grand Opera association will stage ten productions at Shrine Auditorium, including one double bill. One of the most interesting seasons that the association has ever presented is anticipated.

General Director Merola has secured the leading Metropolitan Opera stars, also three European favorites, who will make their American debuts during the local season, Clare Clairbert, Gaetano Viviani, and Sidney Rayner.

Others of the casts will include Gigli, Jeritza, Hope Hampton, Queena Mario, Pinza, John Charles Thomas, Frederick Jagel, Dorothee Manski, and Elinor Marlo. The repertoire will include "La Boheme," "Tannhauser," "La Traviata," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Hansel and Gretel," "Manon," "Salome," "Mignon," "Girl of the Golden West," and "Lucia."

Chorus rehearsals have been under way since May 15, under the direction of Dr. Karl Riedel of Metropolitan Opera of New York. Serge Oukrainsky will have charge of ballet work, while Armando Agnini, stage manager of the Metropolitan is supervising work on the stage settings. He has arranged for new sets for practically all of the operas at a cost of $150,000.

It will be of special interest to note that "Tannhauser" will be presented in an impressionistic manner; "Salome" will have a modern setting; and "Girl of the Golden West" will have a true Western ranchouse for a background.

The orchestra will be composed of the Los Angeles Philharmonic in Los Angeles at present, following extensive tours in Europe and Cuba, and who has appeared twice locally at the time of the production of "Traviata" here last November, and during the current band concert series, is the mother of Miss Caselotti.

BOOK REVIEWS

All in The Racket, by William E. Weeks, a Charles Boni Baper book.

"All in the Racket" is a problem novel. Arthur Garfield Hays has a dissertation on the problem by way of introduction to the story.

The story is a criticism of our legal system and a challenge to those who are confident that the safeguards of criminal law prevent the conviction of innocent men" a conclusion wrongly derived from the difficulty of convicting guilty men."

Mr. Mays is right in assuming that many of us have felt that the rights of the victims of the anti-social individuals were disregarded in the effort to safeguard the criminal from injustice.

"All in the Racket" is a quickly read story, as enthralling as a detective story, of a gangster who is convicted of a murder which he did not commit. So determined are the police that a bad man shall be punished, and this gangster Paul Sella is a bad man, that they plant a bit of evidence, and influence a few witnesses in order to obtain the conviction of Sella. So Sella is sent to his death though Sella was not guilty.

It was horrible injustice that Sella was sent to jail. The book is an argument against capital punishment. Even to the minds of one who is influenced by Mr. Hays humanitarianism, is not wholly convinced by the argument.

Undoubtedly Mr. Hays does not regard the problem of the book as an isolated case, else he would not emphasize it as one of the faults of legal procedure. The situation is a matter of informing the public, not of arousing sentiment. "Framing" a criminal would not be condoned by anyone who was thinking straight. On the other had, such a story as this should not cause us to go off on a tangent and make it easier for criminals to escape punishment for their crime. We must think of the innocent man who suffered at the hands of the criminal before and when he was apprehended and bend effort to punish the right man.

This is a most remarkable little brochure. A little pink booklet of information on travel in Europe presented in the most concise manner imaginable. Its forty-eight pages contains comprehensive information on the "Grand Tour." The Rambling pedestrian spent eighteen months in Europe, in England, France, Switzerland, Spain, Italy, Austria, Germany, Holland, and Belgium. With the exception of Australia and Holland and Belgium at least a month was spent in each country with visits to small places as well as large. The names of the hotels and pensions are given and the outstanding point of interest of each place, population of town and several references to books which it is useful to have read before visiting the respective countries.

Not the least, and possibly the most interesting phase of the book is the table of expenses. It will bolster the hopes of those who sometimes become discouraged saving nickles and quarters for a trip to Europe. Three and a half months expenses in England, including transportation, for two people came to only $564.92. France, including Normandy, Brittany the Chateau county and the Riveira, two and a half months for two people came to $379.30.

A surprising number of good suggestions fo rthe traveler are made in addition to the familiar advise to limit the amount of baggage as much as possible. He recommends day time travel and slow trains, the better to see the country. One can't carry much of a library about Europe and at the same time limit the baggage, guide and informative books with the largest amount of information presented in the most concise manner are the most useful. This one can be carried in the vest pocket without bulking and it has quite a complete little map.

Science and The New Civilization by Dr. Robert A. Millikan, published by Charles Scribner's Sons.

"Science and The New Civilization" will never be a popular book, meaning that it will be read by everybody. But the person who wants to do a bit of serious reading and discover somewhat of the meaning of the progress of science and the one-sided conflict which some good people are waging between science and civilization would do well to devote time to this book. It is not 200 pages in extent. It compresses several articles by Dr. Millikan which have appeared in The Atlantic Monthly, The Forum, Science, and Scribner's Magazine, and other material. The first few chapters treat mechanical and scientific progress in a philosophical and logical manner akin to that of Pupini in "The Romance of the Machine" which was published only a short time ago.

But Dr. Millikan then delves into the developments in science and illustrates his point that every new discovery of science takes its place in the background with all that has been discovered and evolved before which progress is made. The re-orientation must include those truths which have been discovered before. In this science points the way for the human attitude toward the scientific age. Man in his grasp after the new has discarded the past. He has not governed his actions and formulated his morals with an awareness of the truths of the past. Dr. Millikan concedes that there is one "regrettable tendency in modern life for which science is probably to some extent at least responsible. I refer to the craze for the new regardless of the true, to the demand for change for the sake of change, without reference to the consequences, to the present-day widespread worship of the bizarre, to the cheap extravagance and sensationalism that surround us on every side. . . . The spirit of change has been wanting."

A chapter on "Michelson's Economic Value" will prove particularly interesting because of the proximity of a portion of Dr. Michelson's experiment.

This book is the story of the propaganda which preceded and was maintained during the World war. Mr. Viereck defines propaganda so that we have basis for the circumstances to be discussed. "Propaganda," he says, "is a campaign camouflaging its orgin, its motive, or both, conducted for the purpose of obtaining a specific objective by manipulating public opinion."

The author was the editor of "The Fatherland." His father was a naturalized American, his mother was a native of California. His mother's father, he says, traveled west in a covered wagon in 1843, was captured by Indians, and, after thrilling adventures, finally reached San Francisco. He treats of German and British propaganda as it was spread in America. The book is quite dispassionate. Not long ago some of the material contained in the book appeared in The Saturday Evening Post. It was written in the third person with the identity of the author concealed. The articles are incorporated in this book and while it is not written in the third person throughout, the author successfully maintains the same degree of detachment and good temper.

He does not stoop to piling up detail of this piece of propaganda and that it is in that method that the danger would lie of arousing temper. Personalities of propagandists are revealed. The identity of those who manipulated public opinion is revealed.

Other books have been written on the subject. I do not recall having read anything on the subject in addition to the Saturday Evening Post articles already referred to. This book seems very comprehensive and very necessary. The author near the close of his book says that there is "no infallible safeguard against propaganda," save possibly the serum of horse sense and humor. The reading of the book should develop that horse sense which should enable us to keep our heads if another war comes with its inevitable propaganda.

"It is impossible," says Mr. Vierick, "to conduct war without emotional disturbance." Propaganda performs the same service as the war dance of the Indians before they went on the war path. It would be a sorry war if we didn't hate our enemies. We must be made to hate and "Spreading Germans of Hate" impresses us with what an important business the spreading of propaganda is. Sir William Wiseman who is intimately introduced in the book, influential head of the British Secret Service in the United States during critical years one time said that he was "afraid the American people swallowed an overdose of propaganda" and that "the amount they consumed was far beyond" his prescription.

The reader who may be surprised at the extent of the propaganda machine during the time of which this book treats would do well to bear in mind that propagandists are busily engaged though not as fatally engaged at the present time. They are not spreading hatred between nations but they are influencing our economic, social and political life and editors realize it better than any other group of people.

Book Notes....

Clarie Blake, whose first novel, "Sky Farm," was published August 8th, is assistant librarian in a Jersey town on the Palisades across the Hudson from Grant's Tomb. A short story of hers, "The Mold," was three-starred by Edward J. O'Brien several years ago, and was included in one of the annual O. Henry collections. This scene of "Sky Farm" is laid in western Connecticut, where Miss Blake has spent many summers with her family in an old farmhouse built 175 years ago. "The house," she says, "expressed for me the spirit of the mountain. It is stout and whole; its ceilings are low, and its timbers rough. Originally it hadn't a nail in it. Its chimney breast nearly covered one side of the old kitchen, and a six-foot man can go head first into the Dutch oven, turn around with ease, and come out again head first. I know because I wanted to find out so I said he couldn't so he did."

Containing recent revisions by the author, a new edition of Maurice Guest, by Henry Handel Richardson, will be published August 29, by W. W. Norton & Co., Inc. This is the first of Miss Richardson's novels and—in spite of Ultima Thule—is considered by many her best. Utterly different from the Richard Mahony trilogy, Maurice Guest, describing life among musicians in Leipzig, tells the story of a young man's love.

The Leipzig colony was familiar to Miss Richardson. As a girl, she left Australia to study music in Germany. After three years of study, realizing that she could never equal the brilliant foreigners about her, she gave up music as a career, settled in London and devoted herself to writing.

NEWS FROM THE AUTOMOBILE WORLD

H. H. FRANKLIN PRESENTS DATA ON AIR MOTORS

Commenting on the discussion between the Navy department and Calvin Coolidge relative to the superiority of European aviation engines, H. H. Franklin, pioneer engine builder of Syracuse, N. Y., claims that both parties are right. Coolidge stated in his syndicated article, that better airplane engines were being built in Europe than in this country, quoting as his authority a Navy officer. According to Franklin, he should have qualified this statement by adding that Europe has the best water-cooled engines.

"America leads the world in air-cooled power plant development, not only for aircraft but for tanks, armored cars and automobiles. Water-cooled engines are limited in power output by the boiling point of water. Air-cooling permits higher efficiency out of the same size engine, therefore the Navy and Army have gone almost entirely to the air-cooled engine.

"Recent tests at Ft. Meade have shown that a standard air-cooled engine taken from a sedan and installed in a seven ton tank could outperform, outmaneuver and give much greater reliability than the best water-cooled engines developed for that military machine.

"Probably the European aviation motor referred to by the Navy officer was the Maybach 12 cylinder water-cooled engine which was developed for dirigibles and which powers the Zeppelins. A single machine gun bullet could put these motors out of commission however however if they were installed on our air fighters. Every motorist who has run his radiator dry on a long hill or through a leak realizes the many advantages the air-cooled engine has over the water-cooled in battle. There is never a delay caused by the lack of cooling medium.

"Let Europe develop water-cooled engines. We can turn out large quantities of air-cooled engines far superior to the best water-cooled engines," Mr. Franklin said.

Nice Cop Changes Tire While Lady Watches Children

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Aug. 16.—(UP)—Changing a tire for a mother who was minding three babies is all part of the day's work for traffic officers of Butte county, according to a letter received by Frank G. Snook, chief of the division of motor vehicles, from Mrs. E. L. Johnson of Oroville.

Mrs. Johnson had a puncture on her way from Oroville to Gridley and was stalled in the highway, with the youngsters, nine months to four years old, climbing all over her.

"I could have changed the tire alone," she wrote, "but I was offered asistance by a traffic cop. I want to send you my thanks for keeping such gentlemen in this district.

OIL MANAGER

R. J. Grange, manger of the Home Oil company, Anaheim firm, which has just been appointed distributor for this territory of all Seaside Oil company products.

SEASIDE OILS NOW HANDLED BY NEW FIRM

Entrance into the local market was made recently by the Seaside Oil company, refiners and marketers of "Custom Made" gasoline and other petroleum products, by the appointment of the Home Oil company, well known Anaheim oil firm, of which R. J. Grange, is manager, as distributors of the company's line of products in this territory.

In commenting upon the appointment today, Winslow Bushnell, general sales manager of Seaside, predicted unusual success for the local firm, and made public many interesting sidelights on the company's history.

"The Seaside Oil company is one of the oldest independent oil companies operating on the Pacific coast, having been incorporated in 1898, but until 1920 it manufactured and sold only fuel oils and asphalt. Its first gasoline was made in 1920 from crude oil shipped to the Summerland refinery," he said.

"In 1923 the company tied up production in the famous Ventura Avenue fields near Ventura, subsequently building one of the finest and most modern refineries on the Pacific coast. This refinery as originally installed and many times added to and remodelled is today recognized by oil men as one of the most up-to-date and efficient on the Pacific coast. It is not so large, however, but that it is possible to make Seaside Custom Made gasoline and other petroleum products in limited proper quantities, in order to carefully check each step in the refining process."

It is estimated that the center of the north magnetic pole is about 1400 miles south of the north geographic pole.

NEW CHRYSLER IMPERIAL CARS PRICED TODAY

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 23.—Prices on the Chrysler Imperial eight, which was recently introduced, are announced today. There are four body styles in the Imperial line. They are: five-passenger sedan, $2495; close-coupled five-passenger sedan, $2595; seven-passenger sedan, $2695; sedan-limousine, $2895, it was learned from the Headley Motor company, new Chrysler dealers.

Prices on the Chrysler Imperial eight models include six wire or six demountable wood wheels at owner's option, fender wells, trunk rack, bumpers and fenders and metal parts painted to match the body.

The Chrysler Imperial eight is not to be confused with the series of Chrysler eights which have a price range of from $1495 to $1665.

The Imperial eights represent the height of Chrysler craftsmanship and are counted among the finest motor cars in the world. Striking in appearance, they have a wheelbase of 145 inches and an overall height of 68 inches, being built on an entirely new principle in automobile construction pioneered by Chrysler engineers.

Two sloping windshields, mounted in chromium frames, are set in angles to meet at the center in V-shape. Each windshield has an individual windshield wiper. Adjustable sun visors swing down from inside the top to aid the driver and front seat passenger.

The engine of the Imperial eight has a bore and stroke of 3½ by 5 inches and develops 125 horsepower at 3200 revolutions per minute. S.A.E. horsepower rating is 39.20. It is the finest and most powerful engine ever designed by Chrysler engineers and is mounted in rubber with four-point suspension, completely insulating engine impulses from frame and body.

All models of the Imperial lines are wired for the installation of Transitone, the pioneer automobile radio.

PISTON RINGS IN DODGE CARS GIVEN TESTING

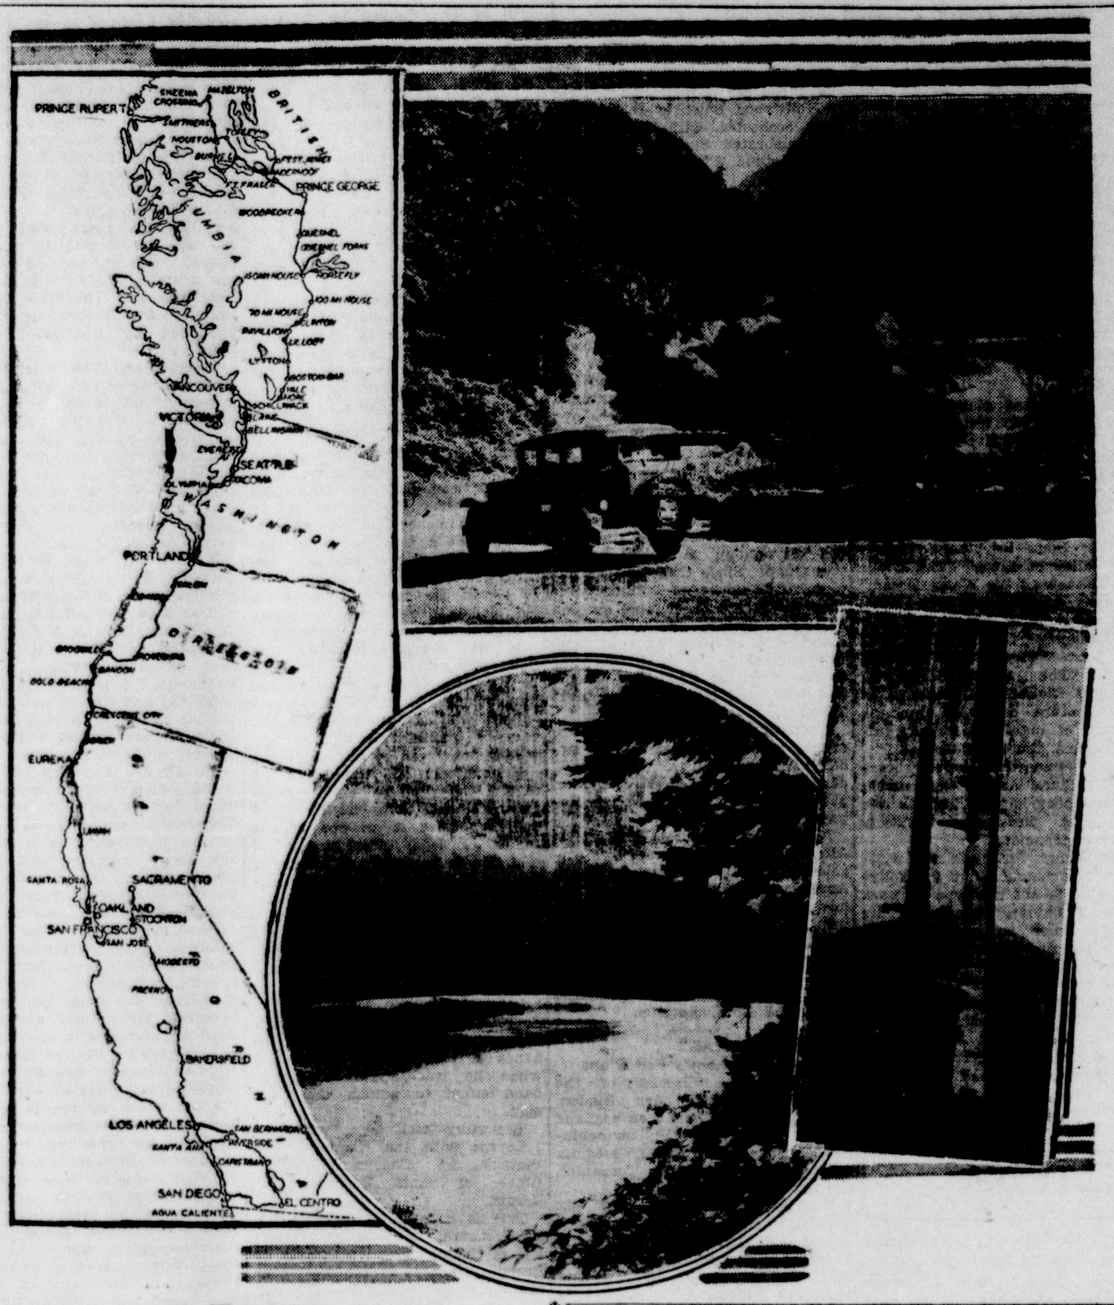

A new system of testing piston rings, said to be the most complete and advanced known to the automobile industry, has just been installed by Dodge Brothers, it was stated by L. D. Coffing, Dodge dealer here.

Each ring, before it is sent to the production line is subjected to a series of tests. One gauge measures the thickness, which must comply with precise specifications so that the ring is free to turn in the piston groove and thus prevent what are called "blow-bys." Other devices known as the "light test" and the "liquid test" detect the slightest deviation from perfect roundness. Still another measures the amount of "wall pressure" or in other words the ability of the piston ring to seal the force of power explosion and at the same time prevent lubricating oil getting into the combustion chamber to increase carbon deposit and foul spark plugs. The same gauge that checks wall pressure also measures the gap between the ends of the ring so that when it is inserted with the piston in the cylinder there will be not less than seven thousandths of an inch clearance nor more than 15 thousandths. Too large a gap, it is explained, will cause a seepage and too small a gap is liable to make the ring "buckle," setting up a source of constant annoyance to the owner of the car.

Another important test used by Dodge Brothers to determine the fitness of piston rings is called the gauge for flatness. This is a simple looking device consisting of two blocks of tool steel hardened and ground and separated from each other by washers, leaving space of two and one-quarter thousandths of an inch over the high limit of the piston ring. The rings are dropped through the space between the two blocks. If they are perfectly flat they drop through easily. Otherwise they become lodged between the blocks and are rejected.

FAMOUS DRIVER TOURS CARIBOU TRAIL

BEAUTIFUL SCENERY FOUND ON CARIBOU TRAIL DRIVE TOLD BY "OUTDOOR" FRANKLIN

Richfield Road Scout
(Special to The Register)

Few motoring routes on the North American continent offer more scenic natural beauties and historical lore than the Caribou Trail leading through British Columbia northward to the remote Land of the Golden Twilight.

This famous old trail was blazed by pioneers in the "days of old, the days of gold" and in the early 60's of the last century, led to some of the richest placer diggings in the world.

Today the slowly moving caravans of a century ago have vanished from the historical trail, but the modernizing hand of progress has not removed the unspoiled charm of nature or the romance and adventure of the world. Fur traders and wandering bands of Indians still roam as in the days when the Republic was young and the Dominion was not in existence. Courageous prospectors still seek the treasures of the hills while the big game hunter still pursues the moose, caribou and elk.

To the consummate skill and untiring efforts of the Royal Engineers belong the credit for transforming this former Indian trail and pioneer pathway into a highway over which the modern covered wagon may move with every degree of safety and comfort.

The completion of the section through the dangerous defiles of Fraser canyon will always remain a marvel of engineering skill. It has been practically carved in many places along the precipitous canyon walls and it bridges yawning chasms and rushing torrents. The present highway through the canyon follows the line of the old road in the main but many grades have been lessened and curves straightened.

The distance by automobile from Vancouver, B. C. to the Indian village of Skeena Crossing, the northern terminus of this road, is 867 miles and the distance can easily be negotiated in four or five days' travel. The first 30 miles are paved and traverse the beautiful fields of the fertile lower Fraser valley.

Along practically the entire length of this highway are rivers, streams and lakes which are indeed a paradise for fishermen. For those who have the time to leave the beaten paths, are inland lakes and streams which provide even greater sport.

Sportsmen's fees, as they affect non-residents, are as follows:

Fishing license good for year, $10; fishing and hunting license, $25, with a charge of $25 for each head of grizzly bear, moose, mountain sheep, elk or caribou shot; $15 apiece for black or brown bear, mountain goat or mule-deer, and $5 each for deer of any other species. A hunter may, however, pay a blanket fee of $100. Non-resident hunters must be accompanied by a license guide or a resident. So plentiful are the fish and game that guides readily guarantee that hunters will get the trophies desired.

The actual beginning of the Old Caribou road is at Yale, 117 miles from Vancouver, a quaint little village whose fast crumbling buildings have witnessed history in the making, first as a fur trading establishment, then as a thriving "gold rush" town.

The road continues along the Fraser river, the greatest waterway in the province, with a length of 750 miles.

The Fraser and its many tributaries are a favorite spawning ground for salmon and in the fall great numbers of them make their way upstream. The Old Caribou trail did not extend beyond Quesnel and the road from that point northward is practically a modern one. The old trail branches eastward from Quesnol and leads a distance of about sixty miles to old Barkerville, center of activity during the gold rush period. Here the old spirit of the Caribou mingles with the atmosphere of the present.

The Chasm, located on the main highway, just 14 miles north of Clinton, is one of the most awe-inspiring spots on the entire route. It is somewhat similar to the Grand Canyon of the Colorado river, resembling an immense trough, 700 feet in depth, carved out by some gigantic force when the world was in its infancy.

The highway continues northward to Prince George, an interesting city once famous as a Hudson's Bay fort, located at the confluence of the Fraser and Nechako rivers.

The last 100 miles leading into Hazelton are amazingly beautiful as many snow-clad peaks are in evidence, greatly resembling scenes in Alaska, glacier fed streams are numerous and the verdure increases. For many miles the highway is lined with hedges of wild rosebushes, intermingled with the blooms of many other wild growths. Wild berry bushes are plentiful.

Old Hazelton is the last northern settlement although it is possible to drive a distance of 35 miles north of that point. To the west the road is being extended into Prince Rupert, but it is only passable now to Skeena Crossing, 16 miles distant from Hazelton. One feels that this unique Indian village with its grotesque but artistically carved totem-poles, is a fitting ending to a wondrous drive which has led from the most populous centers of civilization, through wide areas of open country and sylvan forests, past turbulent rivers and placid mirror-like lakes, to the silent places of the land of the golden twilight.

SUDDEN BURSTS OF SPEED HARD ON TIRE LIFE

The fast, in and out driver who continually abuses his car by sudden bursts of speed and sudden stops, cannot expect to get as good mileage from his tires as his fellow motorist who drives his car safely and sanely. This is the warning of W. G. Pagenkopp of Pagenkopp's Tire Service at 120 South Main street, United States tire dealer.

"Tires today," said Mr. Pagenkopp, "are built to withstand average fast driving, but no tire nor car can stand speeding abuse. The development department of the factory is studying the effect of speed constantly and as a result we have a tire today designed and built to stand up under average fast driving, in short to meet the same demands as the car was built for.

"In studying the effect of speed, tests showed than an increase of 15 miles an hour reduced the life of the tires 50 per cent. Now this doesn't mean that a car can't be driven along at a rate which, though fast, is commensurate with safety, but it does mean that if a driver elects to tear along all day at a 60-mile gait he need not expect to get a long life out of his tires. He is burning up the roads, burning up his car and burning up his tires. If that is the kind of driving he likes, he must pay the cost.

"With tires built to give upwards of three times as much service as they were several years ago, still the owner must do his part and take care of them. Nothing will last under abuse and one of the things a tire needs most is care as to air pressure. If the owner will keep his pressure at the point recommended by the manufacturer he will find his performance will give no cause for criticism."

PLYMOUTH THIRD IN NATION FOR MONTH

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 16.—Complete registration figures from all over the United States for June, show Plymouth in third place in the automobile industry nationally, was the statement authorized today by F. L. Rockelman, president and general manager of Plymouth Motor Corporation.

This compares with Plymouth's rank of eleventh place in the industry in June, 1929, and fourth place nationally in May of this year with such important states as Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Missouri, Nebraska, Iowa, Arkansas, Minnesota and Kentucky giving it third place.

Plymouth's percentage of sales of all automobiles was higher in June than during the corresponding month last year, Mr. Rockelman's statement further pointed out.

FISK PRODUCTS GIVEN OUT BY LOCAL STORES

Based upon the homely and oft-proved truths that a man works best who works for himself; that no hired helper is ever as eager to please the customer as the merchant who hires him, the Fisk Rubber company has, for years, elected to distribute its product through the independent local tire merchant, it was stated by Orval Lyon of Lyon Tire Service, 405 South Main street.

Perhaps some commodities of occasional use and trifling cost may be passed over the counter in exchange for the buyer's money and unconcernedly forgotten. In some types of stores, even tires are sold in this way by disinterested employees.

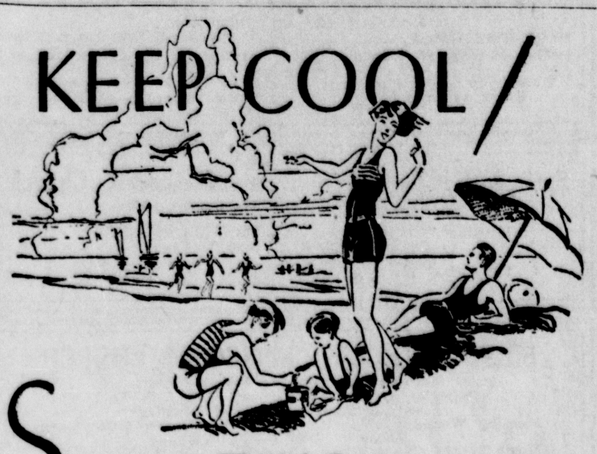

"The sale of a Fisk tire, however, carries with it an obligation to give the buyer more than price tag value for his money; to serve him and keep him satisfied with his purchase," Lyon stated.

No "hired help," as "hired help" goes, does this as earnestly and as freely as an independent merchant whose name and personal pride are displayed on the sign above his store and whose customers are fellow townsmen and neighbors.

Other great manufacturers may choose the cold machine-like plan of centrally controlled outlets to distribute their merchandise. They may even permit "hired help" to make the vital contact with the ultimate users. That, of course, is their right and privilege, it was pointed out by Lyon.

But the Fisk Rubber company, let it be known, by virtue of the same privilege, is definitely and enthusiastically behind the independent tire merchant—the human, home-town merchant who is in business for himself.

"The buyers of Fisk tires are receiving today, and will continue to receive, the best service of any tire buyers in the world, because of this human-interest policy."

IS THE HUMAN ELEMENT AN IMPORTANT FACTOR IN FUMIGATION?

Simplicity is often mentioned as the Keyword of success.

Whenever an operation or process can be made so simple that the results do not depend largely upon the individual performing the operation, that process or operation will eventually supplant others in which the results depend altogether upon the individual.

FUMIGATION is successful because of this very principle. HYDRO-CY introduced under the tent by means of simple applicators diffuses immediately into every nook and corner and comes in contact with every scale pest.

Different operators have no control over the manner in which diffusion of the gas is obtained.

FREE-WHEELING STUDEBAKER IS EASY ON FUEL

Approximately $400,000,000, a sum which would go a long way towards paying the annual interest on the national debt, would have been saved motorists of the United States during 1929, if all automobiles had been equipped with free wheeling, according to Harry Riley, Studebaker dealer here. Free wheeling with positive gear control, is a new engineering principle, developed and perfected by Studebaker engineers, and manufactured under Studebaker patents.

"Exhaustive tests at the Studebaker proving grounds at South Bend, Ind., as well as road tests in practically every state of the union, show that free wheeling effects a saving of 12 per cent in gasoline and 20 per cent in oil," Riley said. "Last year, the consumption of gasoline by automobiles in the United States totaled 13,934,330,000 gallons, and the consumption of oil 450,000,000 gallons, according to figures compiled by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

"Computed on an average of 21.2 cents a gallon for gas, and 25 cents a quart for oil, the amount spent by the American motoring public during the year attained the huge sum of $3,404,077,960, of which free wheeling would have saved $444,489,355.

"The saving of 12 per cent in gas and 20 per cent in oil effected by free wheeling is conservative, and actually increases in proportion to the heaviness of the traffic. The reason for this is that, with free wheeling, car momentum never forces the engine. The instant the foot is lifted off the accelerator, the engine drops to idling speed, while the car continues to glide forward free and unfettered, yet in gear and fully controlled. In consequence, car momentum never forces the engine to pump excess gas and oil into the cylinders.

"Tests at the factory and on the road also demonstrate that, under ordinary driving conditions, the car free wheels an average of one mile in every five. In other words, in 10,000 miles, car momentum alone carries the car a distance of 2,000 miles with the engine running at idling speed—a huge saving in fuel and oil.

"Free wheeling also permits the driver to shift gears easily and silently between second and high at any speed without touching the clutch. The clutch is employed only to start and back up. As a result, the necessity of tiresome pedal pushing as well as the fear of gear clashing are gone forever.

CORD PRAISED BY WINNER OF SPEEDWAY RACE

AUBURN, Ind., Aug. 23.—When Billy Arnold, youthful Chicago racer, drove his front drive car to a spectacular victory at the Indianapolis Speedway last Decoration Day, he got his first thrill in driving a front drive car.

Billy's walk-away at the race, in which he made only a single stop during the 500 miles, and that for gas and water, and the ease of operating the car, led him to buy a Cord front drive passenger automobile soon after the race to test out the principle on actual roads.

In a letter to R. H. Faulkner, vice president of Auburn, after he had owned his Cord 30 days, Arnold says in part:

"After driving my Cord cabriolet forty-eight hundred miles, my enthusiasm has carried me to a point to express my true opinion of the Cord automobile.

"I am enjoying motor thrills that I have never experienced heretofore in any other motor car. The front drive principle in my estimation is the greatest piece of engineering achievement of this day and age.

"In my experience driving race cars through gruesome tests, I can appreciate the motor car that has stamina and with the low center of gravity made possible in the Cord construction I many times feel as though I were riding with the thrills of air maneuverability due to its remarkable cling to the road on turns.

WESTERN AUTO OFFERS CAMPER MANY BARGAINS

The popularity of automobile camping has increased so rapidly within the past few years that it has caused vacationists to extend the camping season into the late summer and fall months, states Jack Campbell, local manager of the Western Auto Supply company.

"Each year in our camp goods department, we notice this increase in late touring," says Campbell. "Late summer and fall are fast becoming the popular camping seasons as there is less congestion, both on the highways and in camps. The foreign tourist stream has receded, autumn rains have cleared the atmosphere and crisp mornings take on a bracing quality.

"To supply the needs of these late summer tourists, the Western Auto Supply company stores are offering one week of camp goods bargains in our camp goods clearance sale. The event should appeal to every thrifty buyer as a great opportunity to save money on guaranteed Western Auto outing and touring necessities.

"Scores of the most useful articles in our camp goods department offered at materially reduced prices, just in time to assure economically, greater enjoyment of the Labor day outing, delayed vacation trips and hunting expeditions."

Hart's Used Car Market Has Two Auto Showplaces

Hart's Used Car market is now operating a used car showroom at the corner of Fourth and French streets, formerly occupied by George Calhoun and also a used car lot at First and Sycamore streets.

All the glass has been removed from the windows of the showroom and the open front shows off every car to a good advantage. Hart's Used Car markets carry the largest stocks of used cars in Orange county and are open evenings.

GOODRICH TIRE COMPANY MAKES AIR CONTAINER

With thousands of Americans and their families now making their annual vacation touring trips, comfort and pleasure is always utmost in their minds. Tire trouble is probably one of the chief annoyances encountered by tourists, and can be easily dispensed with if proper precautions are taken against it.

L. P. Damewood, local Goodrich dealer, explains how easy it is to banish forever the fear of tire trouble by simply installing Goodrich Air Containers in your tires.

"Goodrich Air Containers," says Damewood, "is a new type of inner tube which replaces your present inner tubes, and which are absolutely guaranteed to seal cuts and punctures on running wheels without the loss of air, or the necessity of changing tires.

"This new invention, developed by the B. F. Goodrich company, is one of the most amazing inventions since the introduction of the pneumatic tire," Damewood explains.

"A special strip of compression rubber is built in the Air Container, and when the tire is punctured with a nail or other object, this strip of rubber grasps it firmly and prevents air from escaping. When the nail is pulled out, the rubber instantly seals the hole without the loss of air."

Local motorists who are planning to take a long trip should consider Air Containers as part of their equipment. Just telephone Santa Ana 2468 or call at First and Broadway, and a representative from Goodrich Silvertown, Inc. will be at your service.

By decomposing natural gas at high temperatures and recombining its constituents, products ranging from artificial rubber, anesthetics and motor fuel, to dyes and explosives, are being obtained.

UNITED STATES TIRES HOLD UP UNDER STRAINS

Greater roadability of cars, greater speed on curves, more rapid acceleration and quicker braking as found in the cars of today mean more wear on the tires and consequently, call for greater care in the upkeep of tires.

So, according to Pagenkopp's Super Service, Santa Ana United States tire dealer, a car owner should give more attention to the care of his tires, seeing that they are properly inflated and checking them for possible cuts. If this is done the life of the tire may be greatly increased.

"With the adoption of smaller diameter wheels and lower centers of gravity, more rapid acceleration, quicker breaking and higher speed on curves has been made possible. A small diameter balloon tire makes more revolutions in a mile than a larger one, and naturally the wear is greater.

"This raised a new problem for the tire manufacturer and the engineers of the United States Rubber Company immediately went to work to build more life into the tires to compensate for the greater wear.

"Small diameter balloon tires mean greater roadability, safety and comfort and it was a problem that had to be solved. The present demand is wholly toward better performance and it was incumbent on the tire manufacturers to keep apace with the car manufacturer. As a result, tires of today have three times as much stamina and wearing ability as tires of a decade ago.

"The tire manufacturers have done their part and are still doing it, but on the other hand they call on the tire owners to do their share—and that is to keep a careful check on their tires, keep the pressure at the recommended rate, and see that they are properly adjusted on the wheels."

These Big Speed Wagons Haul Twice the Tonnage Per Day of Ordinary Type Trucks

Model "FD" 2-Ton Speed Wagon

Reo Gold Crown Engine with chrome nickel alloy iron cylinder block and low-expansion pistons

Big Load Capacity Is No Longer Enough, Say Leading Truck Users . . . Speed Wagon Economy, Flexibility, Long Life Set New Efficiency Standards in Hauling

A NEW day has dawned in commercial transportation—a day that counts speed and flexibility of far greater importance than mere load capacity in trucks. The Time Element now is the greatest factor governing both profit and economy in today's hauling, say transportation experts.

Reo Meets the "Time Element"

Reo has met this problem with an utterly new type of transportation—big trucks that step away under full loads with passenger car speed, flexibility and economy. Big trucks that handle twice the tonnage of ordinary, plodding types, in a day's mileage output. By proper ratio of speed to tonnage and frequency of trips they eliminate delays at any point that create a congestion elsewhere. Trucks that not only deliver materials faster, but cheaper—mile after mile—for an unbelievably long, trouble-free life. They offer a far better relationship between the dollars invested and the dollars of revenue whether you haul for yourself or for others. Engineers have long predicted trucks like these—and Reo has built them.

On your request a Speed Wagon salesman will gladly offer proof of Speed Wagon advantages. He will show you, with facts and figures as well as by actual demonstration, just what Speed Wagons will do for your business. A 'phone call will bring you the evidence.

FOX TERRIER MOTHERS TWO ORPHAN CATS

DENVER, Aug. 23.—Denver dogdom boasts of a fox terrier which is mothering two orphaned kittens.

Cappy—which is short for Mad Cap Mitzi, which is the terrier's name—has dogland's animosity toward all other cats in the world, but toward the two little backyard waifs she has adopted, her attitude is quite different.

The dog and its wards are pets of Miss Olivia Tulse.

"Don't you touch Snowflake," Miss Hulse told the dog in emphatic manner when she brought Snowflake, part Angoria, the kitten's mother, home as a new pet five months ago. So Cappy adopted Snowflake as a daily chum. Chummy they remained until Snowflake fell victim of a poisoner's bait. Soon after the two white kittens were born.

Cappy looked on the motherless fluffy kits in the back porch box nest with considerable perplexity, her owner said. The kittens' father, as papa cats usually are—the wretches—is something of a traveling man. He showed no disposition to come around and assume the new family responsibility. Cappy seemed to appreciate the seriousness of the situation, Miss Hulse said, and finally decided to set up an orphan's home and take care of them herself.

Cappy, a wire-haired fox terrier, is about to have some offspring of her own to take care of.

Dr. A. A. Hermann, veterinarian, termed the terrier's adoption of the kittens "decidedly unusual" and one of the few similar cases he has seen in Colorado.

MAY RECOGNIZE UNKNOWN FARMER

MADRID, Aug. 23.—An editorial in the newspaper "La Libertad" suggests that a monument be raised to the Unknown Farmer.

"The Unknown Farmer," this paper says, "as a symbol of the millions of farmers in Spain, past and present, is no less deserving of national recognition than the Unknown Soldier is among the nations who fought in the Great War. He too can be a hero—often is, especially in our country, where modern agricultural facilities and methods are none too common."

The paper goes on to say that a national monument as a token of the country's gratitude for the farmer would, among other things, raise his self-respect and probably would help stem migration from farms into cities, which in some cases is a result of a feeling of inferiority on the part of the farmer.

DOG'S TRICK WINS BACK FORMER HOME

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 23.—If you love dogs, here's one for you. Mike was a bird dog, valued at $300. N. K. Peterson was the owner. Then Mike was lost for 15 months. Peterson ultimately saw the dog in company of I. S. Bentley, who insisted the dog was his "bought it from a Negro."

Peterson brought a replevin action and convinced Squire John Mynatt of his right to ownership when he made Mike sit up on the rear seat of an automobile in a manner designed to keep the cushion clean despite dirty feet. It was an old trick Peterson had taught the dog. The Negro said he had found the dog.

RICE STRAW PAPER

ROME, Aug. 23.—Italy, which has been paying high duties on paper imported from other countries for years, now is establishing an industry to make paper from rice straw. PLATFORM, QUALIFICATIONS

—of—

W. R. (BIG BILL) SYLVESTER
Republican

I herewith present my qualifications and platform for the office I seek in the coming election, that of Sheriff of Orange County.

BUSINESS TRAINING

If elected, I pledge myself to conduct the affairs of the sheriff's office in a business-like manner, and feel I am qualified to do this because of my years of training in business life. All persons would be treated in an impartial way and ALL laws enforced. I have been a resident and business man of this county for 18 years.

APPOINTMENTS

I have had years of training in selecting men to serve in business life, and believe that I am qualified to appoint only those men to office who would serve the county as faithfully as if it were a private concern.

I have not made any promises of offices to any person, as that, in my opinion, is the same as buying votes. Not being backed by either a politician or any political organization, I am unhampered by outside considerations.

ENFORCEMENT AND PROTECTION

The people of Orange county elect its officers to enforce its laws, and when the oath of office is taken, no man can do otherwise, unless he perjures himself.

With Orange county being an agricultural center, I believe the rancher and farmer are deserving of all the protection and co-operation the sheriff's office can render against thievery and malicious destruction of property and crops, and I will give immediate attention to calls for assistance.

ALWAYS ON DUTY

If elected, I will devote my ENTIRE time to the sheriff's office, and have deputies on duty both day and night.

WORK WITH DISTRICT ATTORNEY

I will co-operate with the district attorney, in order to give the greatest efficiency to law enforcement.

18th AMENDMENT

At the present time, much stress is given to the enforcement of the 18th amendment, and I wish to state, that with the co-operation of the people, we can make this, Orange county, as dry as you wish it to be.

I have never been a drinker, as an investigation of my record will prove. I invite said investigation of my past record, as an honest and law-abiding citizen.

KNOW THE DUTIES

I have made a study of the duties of the sheriff, and feel fully qualified to fill the office and serve the people in a business and law enforcement administration, for the betterment of the county.

I solicit your support at the primary election, August 26th, for the office of Sheriff.

INDEPENDENT VOTERS DEMAND CHANGES

Courthouse changes are being demanded by Orange county voters, and the most important of these changes is that of Assessor.

This office affects every resident of Orange county, for it fixes the assessment valuations of property upon which taxes are paid. If your assessment is too high, then your taxes are too high. Where assessments are too low, taxes are too low in proportion to all other county property.

ASSESSMENTS MUST BE EQUALIZED. We have already given you instances of glaring inequalities, which cannot be corrected under the present regime.

For this reason, independent voters will vote Tuesday for

George D. MONTGOMERY
For Assessor

He is a substantial taxpayer and responsible businessman. He has investigated the present inequalities and if elected will correct them.

He will work with other officials and the public for a survey to determine the need for a complete revaluation of lands, as recommended by the last Grand Jury.

He will devote particular attention to inequalities in the assessments of the Irvine ranch, O'Niell ranch, Union Oil Co., and others, where it is shown that they are escaping their just proportion of Orange county's tax burden.

All this Mr. Montgomery will do with equal fairness, justice, and consideration for all, whether small home owner or rich land baron or corporation.

Mr. Montgomery is strictly an independent candidate, and owes no allegiance to any individual, politicical clique, or "boss." He is a man's man, and if elected will fill the office of assessor with credit to the people of Orange county, and with complete satisfaction to the mass of the people insofar as is humanly possible, with no favoritism and no autocratic rule.

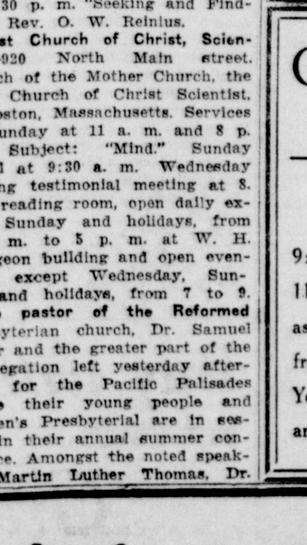

MONTGOMERY FOR ASSESSOR CLUB.

Editor of The Congregationalist

From the mad jealousy of Saul, repeatedly endangering the life of David, it is a pleasure to turn to the friendship of David of Jonathan, Saul's son.

The tokens of this friendship are manifested in a covenant between them and in the consideration with which Jonathan placed upon David his own robes and arms. It is a strange story, full of conflicting elements, but out of it all stands the strength and beauty of a great friendship.

Jonathan seems to have been envied with all of Saul's finer traits and to have escaped that demon of jealousy which was his father's undoing. In a sense there was everything to have made Jonathan envious and jealous of David. In the hope of succeeding his father as king, worldly advantage might have made him distrustful of David and anxious to get him out of the way.

Spiritualities Strongest

What advantage either of these two young men could have had from their compact of friendship rather than the beauty of the friendship itself, it is not easy to see. The relationship between them seems to have been one of disinterested appreciation and of brotherly love and confidence. There was not no element of selfishness. The reason seems to suggest that strong ties are the ties of kinship and nature, the ties of spiritual relationship are even stronger.

Two great friendships stand out from the ancient world that have become a model for mutual devotion in the ties of brotherhood. One, the story of Damon and Pythias, comes to us from the Greek world, and the relationship has been immortalized in a fraternal order widely organized here in America. The other comes to us from the Biblical record in this story of David and Jonathan. It was a friendship that triumphed over hindrances and severe tests.

One cannot read or study such a lesson without contemplating it in the light of the teaching of Jesus concerning friendship. The supreme place that Jesus gave to friendship was indicated when he said to his disciples: "I have not called you servants, but I have called you friends." It was this relationship of friendship that bound the disciples to their Master—a relationship in which they shared his counsels and his confidence. To achieve such friendship is the supreme end and purpose in life and at the same time to attain to life's highest happiness. There is no treasure comparable to the treasure of friendship. There is no asset in a man's life as the asset of a good friend.

Such Friendships Rare

Possibly stories such as that of Damon and Pythias, and this of David and Jonathan, stand out so boldly in the records of literature because such friendships are rare. But why should they be rare? Human nature is endowed with the capacity for friendship. Why should we not rise above the ordinary relationships of life and find the joy and beauty of the relationships that the soul achieves for itself?

Possibly a great deal that we call friendship is not in the last analysis real friendship at all. Acquaintanceship is not friendship, nor is even companionship, though that comes nearer to the reality. "Comrade" is a good word that is more closely related to friendship, but, like the use of "brother" between members of certain Christian groups, the use of the word "comrade" tends to become somewhat conventional and formal.

But "friend" is a word that never loses its real meaning. We do not speak of one as a friend unless we are really close to him in love and confidence, and if we are sure that someone regards himself as our friend, we know that there is a place where we are sure of sympathy, understanding and loyalty. It is here again that Jesus reaches our lives at the highest point as the friend of friends, for in him, and in his relationships to us, is exemplified the fact that earthly friendship can be touched with the richness of divinity.

Discussion Questions on S.S. Lesson

Jonathan and David, a Noble Friendship, I Samuel 18:1-4; 20: 14-17, 32-34; 41-42; II Samuel 1: 25-27, for Sunday, August 24.

1. What is friendship? On what principles should friendship be based?
2. What is the greatest help to us in making friends?
3. How should we proceed to choose our friends?
4. What is the real purpose of friendship?
5. What were the sacrifices that Jonathan was willing to make for the friendship of David?
6. What is the test of friendship? Why is it that one has so few real friends?
7. What should the church do toward the formation and perpetuation of friendships?

Clericus says, "Friendship that is not built on the basis of common faith has not reached the deepest foundation and cannot last. There can be no close and precious friendship so long as a chasm separates us at this point. But a common faith interweaves all the threads of our lives into one web without seam or break."

Lesson Prayer, 'Help us not to be satisfied with less than knowing the best Friend, and knowing Him, lead us to be a real friend to others.

The Church Invites You

ALL MEN NEED GOD

Stanley Jones in addressing a large business men's association was thus addressed by the chairman: "Don't talk to this crowd of business men about religion; they are hard-boiled and will not take it."

In commenting on the situation, Dr. Jones said, "I don't know how to talk about anything else, I took for granted that they were folks just like myself and wanted something, and so I poured out my soul on them." At the close the chairman said, "I take it all back. I am glad you talked to us in that way. We are men as well as business men."

The conclusion drawn is that man has a fundamental need—God. Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?

The Better Way

The Evils of Our Civilization

Kirby Page says, "The evils of our generation are not due primarily to the depravity of man's nature. The human stuff available for the creation of a new society is sufficiently sound and trustworthy to save us from despair. The real difficulty is found in the fact that many of the major appeals of our day are directed to the anti-social tendencies of man. The primary emphasis in our civilization is upon possession. An acquisitive society will always be divided and torn within itself. While the idea is held before children that success is measured chiefly in terms of luxury and physical sensation; while natural desire for possession is accentuated in a thousand ways—just so long will society resemble a battlefield.

If for one generation we could control the stimuli that motivate human conduct, we could wholly remake society. By substituting the ideal of creativeness for that of possession, we could transfer energy from the breathless pursuit of things to a continuous search for the good, the true and the beautiful. If the combative tendencies were directed against disease, poverty, superstition, ignorance and crime instead of being released in an effort to annihilate human foes, unbelievable transformations could be wrought."

World-Religious News

Sister Felicite Beauvois, directress of a dispensary in a suburb of Paris has been awarded a prize of 15,000 francs for the "finest and most beautiful devotion of whatever nature." She devotes her time to the alleviation of suffering in one of the poorest quarters of Paris and is called "The little Sister who always laughs." She will devote the prize money to vacations for poor children.

A fund of $6,000,000 which was left recently to be divided among worthy national institutions has been disposed of by its trustees, Calvin Coolidge, Julius Rosenwald and Alfred Smith. After investigating about 500 institutions in 8 months, they selected 34 beneficiaries. Among them were the Boy Scouts and the Girl Scouts each of whom received $500,000; the Red Cross $375,000; the Y. M. C. A., $250,000 and the Y. M. H. A., $75,000.

The 20th conference of the World's Alliance will be held in Cleveland August 4-9, 1931. It is also planned to hold the 43rd International convention of the North American Associations joining with the World Conference.

PARIS, Aug. 23.—Some men are too particular. Because his son was served before him at dinner, Robespierre Godin, a Paris florist, father of 25 children, fired a revolver at the young man. But he missed his son and hit his wife, the bullet cutting off the end of her nose.

THE CHURCH SPONSORS ALL THAT IS BEST IN COMMUNITY LIFE

If it were not for the fact that the Church has been the accepted leader of constructive thought and activity for hundreds of years it would not be flourishing and growing as it is today.

Wars come and go—boundaries change—monarchs rise and fall—but the Church and its good influence carry on, and there is no community activity or cooperative movement toward improvement that cannot be traced either directly or indirectly to its leadership.

It is history that law, order and progress did not touch our frontier towns until the Church and its organization was established there and once established its influence has never been questioned or repudiated.

The leadership of any community, be it new or old, eventually gravitates to the sound and least selfish of its citizens—and common sense if not spiritual sense calls for the Church and its orderly method of improving community life.

This mantle of good influence which the Christian church spreads over every community it enters is due in large part to its universal appeal. The Church is not a select circle of the immaculate—but a home where the outcast may come in. It is not a palace with gate attendants and pompous sentinels to awe and discourage the stranger—but rather a hospital where the broken-hearted may be healed, and where all the weary and troubled may find rest and take council together.

Church Forum

(Send church and Sunday school problems in question form to the church editor; question with answer will appear in later issue.)

How lead the children to the beginners' department of the church school to appreciate a church service of worship?

This question can be answered by giving the experience of Miss Elizabeth Shields and her class of beginners in a vacation church school. She prepared a lesson in terms of the child's experience, the title being "Why I Go To Church." The aim was to give the children a brief period of happy worship in the church auditorium where they met the pastor as a leader in this worship. The activity was so planned as to develop a situation through which the child would receive something that could be given by beautiful music, beautiful windows and the presence of the pastor in the pulpit. The leader told the story of Samuel and with this as a setting invited the children to go immediately into the church where they might hear sweet music and talk to the Heavenly Father. As the children were quietly seated they sang "Father We Will Quiet Be." They were lead by the pastor in Scripture reading and prayer. Following this brief service, the children were allowed to go into the pastor's study and present him a gift they had made. Thus did Miss Shields utilize the experience of the church in the curriculum of religious education and developed respect and interest in the worship service of the church.

The Way to Divorce

Suspicion, lack of confidence, jealousies, fault finding, quarrelling are the beginnings of a possible developing chasm. The cure for divorce is not at the end of the road but at the beginning.

An old minister used to give advice to young people being married, "Never both get angry at the same time, for it takes two to make a quarrel. As great oaks grow from little acorns, so do divorces spring from little quarrels."

Confidence, trust, kindness, courtesy, frankness, purity and love cultivated persistently will dispel the luring traits of dissension and division. An ideal home functioning into a practical program for the highest welfare of the children and the good to be done everywhere offers a challenge for a union of heart and hand. "We together have a great work that we must do" is a slogan of a happy home.

Most Exclusive Club For Cripples

How "The Chair Warmers," an organization whose 19, "dollar-a-year" members are spread from London to San Francisco, get together by short wave radio and hold daily meetings, though they all are confined by crutches and wheeled chairs in hospitals or their homes

Walter J. Colpus . . . sits amidst the complicated equipment of his station, W8BRS . . . and conducts the "meetings" of the shut-ins.

Dr. George W. Kirk . . . entertained the first convention of the club. . . . He practiced medicine for years, though paralyzed.

ONE sunny Sunday morning, last summer, a strange gathering of men converged upon the home of Dr. George W. Kirk in the little town of Curtice, O. Singly and without ostentation they came, most of them in closed automobiles, completing long and tedious journeys from their homes throughout the country.

It was still too early for the neighborhood to be awake. Few residents of Curtice were out. The hotel across the street showed no sign of activity. Church had not yet begun.

Once or twice an early riser passing by would see one of these strange visitors removed tenderly from his automobile by one or two able-bodied friends, placed in a wheel chair on the sidewalk and rolled up to the steps of "old Doc Kirk's." There he would be carried up and into the home of the aged physician—a sight not unusual to the residents of Curtice and therefore not to be commented upon even in that small and inactive town.

So, through the early morning, these strangers hobbled on crutches or rolled in wheel chairs into Doc Kirk's home until almost a score were assembled there.

Late that afternoon, the populace of Curtice, O., passing by Doc Kirk's home in greater numbers and lolling on the porch of the hotel across the way, gazed bewilderingly at an even more unusual sight. For while they entered singly and without show, these strange visitors came out together, all hobbling or being carried to their cars.

This was the sensational climax to the first annual convention of the Chair Warmers' Club!

EACH morning at 9 these "chair warmers," every one of whom is crippled so that he has to depend on crutches or wheel chairs to get about, "met" and conducted their daily "business." But these daily meetings were managed by long distance, through the medium of short-wave amateur telegraphy, while each member remained seated at his own home transmitter with headphones to his ears and his hand at the telegraph key.

This Sunday morning, finally, the chair warmers could get a good look at their fellow members with whom they had been conversing by long distance for so long. Especially did they want to see old Doc Kirk, the oldest of their group and one of the most active. Dr. Kirk is 80 now, a victim of infantile paralysis since he was 18 months old. Despite his handicap, he was graduated from a Toledo high school and medical college and practiced medicine until 1911.

The members also had a chance to meet Walter Colpus, Jr., of Pontiac, Mich., who had been running their organization. Walt is organizer, secretary and manager, while James C. Lisk of Lima, O., is president. But Colpus keeps up the communication among the members.

Eight years ago Colpus had a reputation as an outdoor man. He was considered an excellent marksman and spent his winters hunting and trapping. Gradually paralysis set in and one day he found himself a total shut-in. Almost over night Colpus was removed from the fresh air and sunshine to a bed and, what was to him, a stuffy room.

When Walt became strong enough to sit in a wheel chair he began to look around for something to occupy the long hours during the day and night when he couldn't sleep. One day he wheeled himself into a room where his brother was building a small, short-wave radio set. He has been in that room almost every waking hour since.

First he mastered the intricate mechanism of the equipment and the Morse code. He made improvements in the set and finally got his license and call letters — W8BRS. In the dot and dash code of amateurs, Walt strayed over great distances, talked to many other amateurs, listened to government messages and heard ships at sea.

Seated before his instrument board one morning, two years ago, Walt caught the call letters W9WV, Kansas City, and soon he was conversing with the operator, Max Colvin, crippled magazine vendor who was known to thousands of Kansas City people.

That day the Chair Warmers' Club was born.

For months, each day, Walt and Max tapped out messages to each other, joking about the weather and even their own physical disabilities, exchanging hardly a word of sorrow or depression. There were other shut-ins like them on the air at the time, each of them a "ham," each with his own short-wave outfit. Gradually they wormed into the daily "meeting" of Colpus and Colvin, until Colpus got the idea of organizing.

Youngest Member Raymond Tucker . . . is only 14, but a proficient operator.

Colpus . . . organized the club . . . after he made accidental contact with other cripples . . . through his interest in amateur wireless.

Charley R. Estes . . . is president of the Missouri shut-ins' association . . . is active in newspaper and magazine work despite his handicap.

LYING almost helpless in bed, Jim Lisk kept the world informed of conditions in the Lima territory, calling for aid and handling all the messages to and from officials. His station call letters are 8EQ.

The club also issues a monthly magazine, mimeographed and illustrated with comic cartoons all sent in by the members. The cost of the magazine is defrayed by the annual dues of $1 and the publication goes free to all members, seniors and juniors.

Lisk is the editor-in-chief and Hugh Hossler of Chardon, O., is assistant. Hossler, however, does the major part of the work. He cuts the stencils, prints the pages on a mimeograph machine and mails the magazine to the members.

Hossler was paralyzed from an accident during his service in the navy.

On his staff is a technical editor, F. R. Gibb, W8BAU, of Columbus, O. The members get information from him on the proper construction and operation of their transmitters and receivers, and they can have it either by direct radio or in the pages of their magazine. Gibb, helpless from the waist down, is an expert on radio work. He was studying electrical engineering at college when stricken with the malady that made him eligible.

Another active member is Charles R. Estes, W9FYM, of Brunswick, Mo. Charlie has been confined to his wheel chair for 12 years with arthritis. Despite his deformity, however, he conducts a magazine agency and acts as correspondent for a Kansas City newspaper. In addition he's president of a Missouri men's shut-in organization.

Youngest of all chair warmers is Raymond Tucker, 14-year-old boy of Grosse Point, Mich., who has been disabled for eight years from the effects of a fall.

The only two women in the club are juniors, one of whom hopes soon to become a full-fledged amateur and a senior. She's Kate Becker of Chicago. Miss Becker, who was stricken with heart disease and crippled, has considerable musical talent, and has written several musical compositions. She has just completed a two-months' study of the code, and hopes soon to get her license and radio apparatus so that she may participate fully in the meetings.

The other woman junior member is Margaret Macauley of Detroit. These two girls have earned their good standing, and may some day win senior membership. But to girls in general, the club is a poor prospect. Colpus is prejudiced, he frankly admits. You can't blame him, for he was himself a victim of one, and the members haven't yet stopped good-naturedly taunting him about it.

She was a good-looking girl "ham," and a member of the Chair Warmers until the men discovered that she wasn't a shut-in, and threw her out.

By that time, however, Colpus himself had come to admire her. She sent him her photo ,and he fastened it to the wall beside him.

One day Colpus was photographed at work and copies of the picture were sent to all the members of the club. Shortly afterward, veiled remarks about Walt's "lady friend" began to click over the headphones. That led him to examine the photograph he had sent to his fellow members.

He found the smiling countenance of the young feminine "ham" beaming out over his shoulder from its place on the wall in the background of the picture. But the picture is still on the wall, although the incident made feminine membership in the club more difficult.

These are the members of the Chair Warmers' Club:

CHAIR WARMERS CLUB

MEMBERS CORRESPONDENCE

Hugh Hossler . . . does most of the active work on the club magazine, cutting stencils, mimeographing, mailing.

Kate Becker . . . is now only a junior member . . . but is rapidly gaining proficiency, hoping for senior standing.

Just before the club was to have its charter meeting, Colpus failed to get a response to his call. Colvin had died. That delayed the first meeting somewhat, but a few weeks later it was held and the club organized.

Colpus still laughs when he recalls the first election of officers.

"We had an awful time that morning," he says, "when we discovered, after counting noses—or call letters—that we had just enough members to fill all the offices. It was easy then. Each one decided what office he wanted to hold and the election was all over."

Today there are 19 members, all full-fledged radio "hams," each with his own call letters. Allied with them are 16 other disabled enthusiasts who are not qualified to become members until they have mastered the Morse code and gained their amateur licenses and call letters. Meantime they listen in to the "seniors" as members of the "junior" Chair Warmers' Club.

There are no women among the seniors, but two have joined the juniors and hope soon to qualify for membership in the major organization. They are Margaret Macauley of Detroit and Kate Becker of Chicago. The men are rather skeptical about women in their club. They've had some sore experiences.

"We had quite a few women in our junior club at one time," Colpus recalls, "and some even in the club itself. But we kicked them out. We discovered they were not shut-ins, but were merely trying to gain publicity or something.

"They almost broke up the organization, too. You see, the men in the club don't see pretty girls very often.

TO make matters worse, some of the girls sent their pictures around the circuit. Well, you know, what a pretty girl will do to a man. Her picture can cause almost as much trouble. But they're out now."

Everything is serious business, but the seriousness of the club is confined merely to the assurance that only genuine shut-ins participate in the membership. Otherwise the meetings are merely an exchange of good-natured banter.

Each morning Colpus calls his fellow members to order.

That is, he taps out a sort of introductory message, and the others listen in. On alternate mornings he permits the president, Jim Lisk, to break in and conduct part of the meeting. On intervening mornings others break in. This division of time is necessary because Colpus can listen to only one at a time and all "business" must be done with him as intermediary.

Walt's dots and dashes are picked up by shut-ins all over the country and even in England, where the disabled Maurice W. Pilpel of London listens at his station, G6PP. The meeting is conducted on the regular amateur wavelength of 42 meters, so that any "ham" can listen in but only the qualified members can participate.

The "business" consists of anything and everything—whatever the one at the key happens to think about—the weather, politics, in fact anything, and all in a wholesome, congenial manner.

Sometimes they take up the matter of entering a junior into the senior organization, which isn't often. The juniors get advice by radio from the "older" group, and their radio equipment is furnished free by friends of the club and by manufacturers who have become interested in the organization. When they get their licenses they become regular members.

As "hams," the members are affiliated with the American Radio Relay League and handle a great deal of free message traffic for the larger organization. W. M. Cory Discusses Cover Crops Over Radio KREG

SOIL BUILDING PROGRAM GIVEN BY FARM CHIEF

BY W. M. CORY
Acting Farm Advisor

(Editor's Note—This is the text of a radio talk given over Radio KREG Monday night).

At this season of the year consideration should be given to the adoption of a soil building program for many of our field and horticultural crops. Surface mining that takes place year after year with the complete removal of crops, cannot go on indefinitely without an eventual decline in yield unless these elements are replaced. With the annual crops the grower has the opportunity of practicing crop rotation or summer fallow where the surface is clean cultivated for a season. Obviously such a soil management program is not possible with tree crops. Here the grower is confronted with the problem of getting plant food down to the feeder roots in such quantities as not to be wasteful and still supply the necessary nutrients for maintaining a satisfactory tree growth and crop yield.

No Reaction

Deep rooted trees such as walnuts, have shown no experimental evidence of response in increased yield to fertilizer application. The problem here appears to be a matter of keeping the surface soil in such physical condition that water penetration can be easily obtained. Trees having a tendency to send feeder roots near the surface, such as the citrus, almost invariably respond to fertilizer applications. Their feeding area is more limited and naturally a rapid depletion of nutrients takes place unless others are added from time to time. In citrus fertilization, as is true in most plants, organic matter takes an extremely important place. Its presence and ultimate incorporation into soil promotes bacterial activity, improves the physical condition of the soil, and adds plant food. Consequently a high organic content in the soil is desirable to maintain.

Three Methods

How can this be done? The three most common methods of building up the organic content of the soil and maintaining the surface in such physical condition as to readily take up water is by adding (1) barnyard manure, (2) a bulky legume, such as bean straw or alfalfa hay, or (3) growing a legume cover crop, (4) or a combination of these. A legume crop is grown because of its nitrogen content and fixation ability. In general a cover crop is selected because of its yield and nitrogen content since nitrogen is the element in which most of our soils are deficient. Winter cover crops are more to be recommended than summer cover crops because their water requirements are less and because they can be worked under in the spring before it competes with the root activity of the trees. Likewise, early working of the cover crop permits its incorporation into the soil in time to provide plant food for the maturing crop in the spring. If the cover crop used in connection with citrus, is permitted to go after the middle of February before being worked under, it comes into direct competition with the tree roots at a time when extra demands are being made upon the tree to supply plant food material to size up the crop. This starvation is apparent later in the yellowing of the leaves and unusually large number of small sized fruit.

Cover Crops to Plant

The area in which winter cover crops can be grown to advantage is limited. Here in Orange county there are a number which flourish. Of these, melilotus indica or bitter clover, the small seeded horse bean and vetch are the most promising. Melilotus medica is probably recognized as the leading winter cover crop in southern California. In tests at the citrus experiment station at Riverside, it outyielded vetch which is quite commonly grown for green manure purposes.

Melilotus indica thrives in a wide variety of soils but usually grows most rapidly in a sandy loam. In the first few weeks of growth it resembles alfalfa. Likewise the seed closely resembles alfalfa. Owing to the fact that often times quite a high per cent of the seed is hard and will not germinate the first year it is usually advisable to sow from twenty to twenty-five pounds of seed per acre.

Experience has shown that usually a better stand is obtained if the seed is sown just after irrigation. The irrigation furrows should then be made close enough together to permit a complete wetting of the surface or a poor stand will result. For best results seeding should take place prior to the middle of September. Frequent shallow irrigations will be necessary until the plants become established.

The Small-Seeded Horse Bean

The plant is an annual legume belonging to the vetch group, with erect, coarse and large leaves. There is usually one strong central root, which characteristic is desirable in a heavy soil, in that it tends to pierce channels through which, when the plant is destroyed allow water to penetrate more readily. Heavy silt or clay loam soils appear to provide a more favorable environment for the horse bean than do the lighter sandy soils. Its water requirements are large particularly when the plant is getting established, which probably explains its preference for a loam or clay soil. Seeding is generally done in September or October. Rapid growth caused by earlier planting frequently exposes it to fungus and insect attack. A heavy infestation of aphis will materially lessen the yield of green manure. These may be exterminated by spraying with Black Leaf 40 at the rate of 1 1-4 teaspoonful to one gallon of water. This, of course would be an added expense. The seed is about the side of a pea and when grown for cover crop purposes, about 80 pounds is planted per acre. The rate of seeding must be largely determined by the grower, depending upon the spread of the trees. The best conditions for planting are a moist seed bed with a mulch on top, and planted with a drill set to place the seed in moist soil.

Vetch Is Similar

Vetch is similar in culture to the small-seeded horse bean. In the event a drill is not available, the seed may be broadcast and harrowed in. Then when the land is furrowed out for irrivation, a good covering of the seed should be obtained.

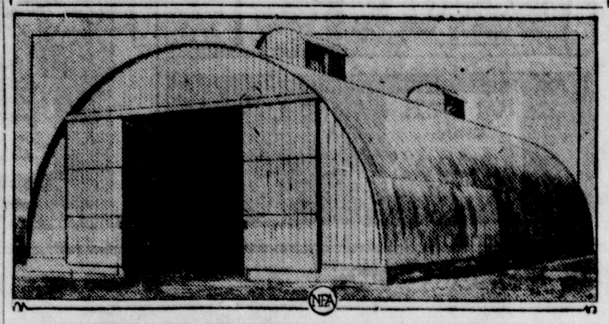

In concluding these few comments on cover crops, it can be said that if a good growth is obtained it has the value of from three to five tons of ordinary manure per acre. Since this can be obtained at little added cost other than the cost of the seed and irrigation water ther are but few groves where the growing of a winter crop would not be an economical procedure. It will serve to build up the organic matter and nitrogen content of the soil, both of which are essential plant foods.

FOR EXTENSION WORK

The federal government appropriates for each state each year $10,000 for extension work, and an additional $4,100,000 for all states, which is distributed according to farm population.

HANGAR-TYPE FARM BUILDING

This building isn't a hangar for a baby blimp. It's a new type farm building appearing in the middle west for storing grain and large farm machinery. It is supported by fabricated steel trusses 15 feet apart. It is 40 by 90 feet, and is said to provide the largest storage space with the least expense and with the greatest strength against wind stresses.

CALIFORNIA CLIMATE SAVES MAJOR CROPS WHILE MIDDLE WEST SUFFERS GREAT LOSS

By ELWOOD SQUIRES
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
(Special to The Register)

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Aug. 23.—(UP)—California's climate lived up to its reputation again during the past month, with field crops prospering while in the mid-west many of these same crops were ruined by drought. The California Co-operative Crop reporting service has compiled its summer resume of the field crop situation and found the state in a most advantageous position.

Of the 15 major crops in the state, only three indicate a decrease in production for the year. They are cotton, potatoes, and "tame hay," exclusive of alfalfa and grain hay.

Wheat and barley led in increased production, with the former standing at 14,994,000 bushels, an increase over 1929 of about 2,500,000, and barley forecast at 33,396,000 bushels, a 4,000,000 bushel increase.

Indian corn the hardest hit of all crops in the midwest, showed an increase of nearly 300,000 bushels in California.

Oats have turned out better than expected, this year's crop totaling 5,120,000 bushels, compared with 4,437,000 in 1929. The increase is about the same proportion as for the entire country.

Higher temperatures during July was beneficial to the rice crop. The indicate yield is now placed at 57 bushels per acre, forecasting a total crop of 6,270,000 bushels, a slight increase over last year. The U. S. crop as a whole fell about 10 per cent.

The increased area of sugar beets throughout the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys will materially increase the average yield per acre for the state. Production is forecast at 793,000 tons, which is a 250,000 ton increase over 1929. An increase was noted generally for the U. S.

Cotton has fallen off in production in this state, as it has all over the producing centers of the nation. About 224,000 bales are predicted, a loss of some 30,000 bales compared with last year.

Only about 60 per cent of the hop acreage worked in 1929 is under cultivation this year, with some improvement reported during the past month, principally in the Sacramento valley. Coast hops are in poor condition and probable production will not exceed 4,200,000 pounds.

ACREAGE INCREASE

4-H Club Youths Working Toward State Convention

BERKELEY, Aug. 23.—Three hundred pigs, fed and fitted by members of 4-H agricultural clubs in the state, will be judged in the finals of the pig club contest sponsored by the University of California Agricultural Extension Service. The pigs will be judged at the California State Fair, Sacramento, August 30. Cups and prizes will be awarded there on September 5.

The boys and girls who entered this contest started feeding their pigs last May. The animals have been brought along and are now being finished by the club members in their local projects. Before they are sent to Sacramento, the pigs will be thinned out in local competitions so that only about half will be judged at the State Fair.

Judged By Districts

The pigs at Sacramento will be judged first by districts, of which there are three in the state. Cups will be given the winners in each district. The winners of each district competition will then be judged in a state sweepstakes contest.

On September 5, a thousand club members ,boys and girls, will be guests of the state fair, and the trophies will be awarded at that time. A dinner will be given them on the fair grounds, and the day will be designated as 4-H Club Day at the fair.

Club Convention Planned

The annual convention of the 4-H clubs, which before has been held in October, this year will be held on September 4, 5 and 6. The second day will be devoted to the state fair, and all the club members will be taken by special train from the Branch of the College of Agriculture at Davis, where the convention is to be held, to Sacramento.

In addition to school busses and private automobiles, four special trains will bring the thousand club members who have earned the distinction of winning the right to attend, to Davis. For several years past, two or three sections of the convention have been held; this year the number of delegates has been lessened through stricter regulations, and but one convention will be held.

All 4-H members of Orange county are living in high hopes of being chosen to represent their club at the annual 4-H convention which is held at the University Farm, Davis, September 4, 5 and 6. The number allotted to Orange county is 23 members and they will be selected from fifteen local communities and will represent sixteen of the major agricultural enterprises of the county. Each club is selecting one delegate and two alternates so that the assigned number may be taken to Davis in the event of the principal delegate not being able to attend.

Rattlesnakes Hard Pressed By Turkey

SANTA ROSA, Calif., Aug. 23.—If you ever should be asked to bet on a fight between a turkey and a rattlesnake—bet on the turkey.

Ritchie Hayden, rancher near here, came on the climax of a contest between these two strange adversaries.

The snake had fastened its fangs in the quills at the base of the feathers. The turkey in attacking its assailant had pecked the reptile's head nearly off. Venom of the snake had failed to affect the hollow quill of the turkey.

REFORESTATION

Reforestation in the United States last year restored to tree growth a total of 111,175 acres, according to the U. S. forest service.

GARDEN HELPED USING MANURE IN QUANTITIES

Manure is necessary in every garden to maintain both the fertility and the water-holding capacity of the soil. Chemical fertilizers alone can not supply this need.

The necessity for material of this kind is shown by the trouble and expense to which the farmers of manu communities resort to get manure for their crops. In some localities the incorporation of a green manure crop in the rotation has helped the farmer. As a rule green manuring is not practical in the small garden and in many communities it is practically impossible to purchase animal manures.

Fortunately a good substitute may be obtained. The gardener, by using weeds and other wastes that are continually accumulating, may acquire a good compost pile that will greatly improve his soil.

Organic Compost

Start a pile four feet square and add to it all available organic material ,discarding anything of a woody nature like twigs from trees and trimmings from rose bushes. Make this pile a little more than a food deep, wet it thoroughly, then tramp it down as solidly as possible.

After a thorough tramping apply about five pounds of ammonium sulphate, four pounds of finely ground limestone and a pound or more of acid phosphate. Then put on another layer. Keep the pile wet.

Additional layers may be added until it is about six feet high. It is not advisable to make it higher than this. It should be left untouched for at least four weeks, then it may be turned over to hasten rotting in preparation for fall planting.

Prepare for Spring

The same method is desirable in the fall when cleaning up the garden for winter. Include in the compost all the leaves that can be spared from mulching about those plants that require such protection. Such a compost heap prepared in the fall will be in excellent condition for late spring use adn in fair condition for earlier application.

Of course, the most desirable compost is that prepared from a combination of bluegrass sods and animal manures with some acid phosphate. It rots less rapidly, but from it is derived the soil on which most greenhouses depend for their results.

NINTH MONTH OF EGG TEST CLOSES

BY W. M. CORY
Acting Farm Advisor

The standing of the various entries at the egg-laying contest at Pomona at the end of the ninth month is close. The E. C. Hogsett entry of Pomona is leading with 2053 eggs, representing the production of 10 hens for nine months. The closest contestant is George C. England's entry of Inglewood with 1954 eggs for the same period. The other 23 contestants follow in close order.

The high pens for the month were Harry N. Boyle, Escondido, first, with 244 eggs, and the Hogsett poultry ranch second with 239 eggs.

High hens for the month were: First, Fontana Farms company, Fontana, No. 516 hen, laying 30 eggs in the month; second, M. F. Donahae, Pomona, hen No. 662, laying 29 eggs.

The high hen to date is No. 516 owned by Fontana Farms company with 240 eggs to her credit. Her closest competitor is No. 651, owned by George C. England, with 228 eggs.

There was an average consumption of 3.2 pounds of mash and 2.9 pounds of grain with 1.2 pounds of greens and .67 pounds of milk. All hens in the contest averaged 19 eggs for the month. The total feed consumption per hen for the nine months is 26.75 pounds of mash, 29.59 pounds of grain, 10.46 pounds of greens and 4:35 pounds of milk. The average production to date is 159.43 eggs.

PREFERS SNAKE AS PET

MOUNT VERNON, N. H., Aug. 23.—Everyone has some kind of a pet but Alex Milne, a farmer of this city, prefers a snake and for an excellent reason.

The snake is not only a pet in Milne's opinion but also performs a good day's work and asks nothing in return.

Handicapped by a leg injury and unable to reach down to remove the grubs, worms and insects that raise havoc with his farm, Milne each day takes the snake to his long rows of growing potatoes and other vegetables and the viper removes the pests much to its likening by swallowing them.

When the day is over the snake hies off to its haunt nearby and rests for the following day.

FUR CONSUMPTION

The United States consumes more fur than any other country in the world, the U. S. department of agriculture reports. The annual production in this country is about $70,000,000 worth of pelts. In addition to these, furs are imported from 80 other countries.

APPLE FARMERS SEEK WATER

Apple farmers in Ohio were so seriously affected for lack of water that this typical scene shows the growers installing an electric pump for supplying water to a series of temporary orchard irrigation ditches like the one shown in the inset.

Report Shows Drought Causes $250,000 Apple Loss

PROCTORVILLE, O., Aug. 23.—The nation-wide drought has hit Lawrence county, heart of the Rome Beauty apple country, so hard that it stands to lose an apple crop estimated at $250,000 and orchards worth many times that amount.

Farmers in this section can't recall a drought that extended without a break as long as the present one has, and are at wits end trying to devise some means of irrigation to water their orchards.

This section, one of the most productive apple belts in the country, doesn't expect to salvage this year's crop of little, rock-like fruit.

Its irrigation efforts are directed toward saving the trees for next year's crop. The fruit this year is so unsatisfactory that it is expected even hogs will turn up their noses at it when used as food.

The Lawrence fruit growers were at first alarmed, then frantic and finally apathetic as they watched the intense heat of late June and July curl the leaves of their trees and shrivel the fruit. Only in the last two weeks have they roused themselves from their depression to battle with unaccustomed weapons against the spectre of blasted orchards.

Water! Water!

The variety of methods used for irrigation present some of the weirdest sights imaginable. One farmer managed to get an old fire engine, abandoned last year by the Proctorville fire department, and has placed it on the river bank to pump water for him.

In other sections of the county, where the Ohio river is not available for water supply, men are driving wells in their orchards and still others are trucking it long distances.

B. F. McCown, near Proctorville, has been pumping and spraying 1200 gallons of water an hour for the last three weeks on a 65-acre orchard with 2800 trees. Milton Gardner is the farmer who commandeered the old fire engine, and he has installed pipe lines from the river bank to his 55-acre orchard.

Drinking Water Scarce

Water for trees is not the only worry of people hereabouts. Drinking water is at a premium and the majority of the wells and cisterns, except those known as "driven wells," have been dry for weeks. A municipal well in Proctorville has been repaired and is furnishing water for many of the residents of the village.

Doctors are warning against the use of water from any shallow well for drinking purposes, and are freely advising the boiling of all water used in the home.

Only two cases of typhoid fever have been reported here, but the threat of an epidemic is ever present under such conditions. High temperature marks of 108, 105 and 105 1-2 degrees have been recorded during a single week here recently.

Lawrence county has always been considered the home of the Rome Beauty apple, and several well-supported legends are told of the planting of the first tree. Johnny Appleseed, that romantic character out of early American history, is said to have started many orchards in southern Ohio and it is presumed that those old-time trees were ancestral to many of the types now known here.

FARM INSPECTORS PASS 51,501 CARS

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 23.—Shipping point inspection of California agricultural products totaled 51,501 cars during the fiscal year just ended, the state department of agriculture reported.

This was 972 cars more than the average for the past six years. Under this inspection the growers certifies to the buyer of his produce its quality and condition at time of shipment. At the same time the buyer guarantees to the seller acceptance of the product certified by shipping point inspection.

July inspections were heavy, the department reported, due to certification of apples from the Sebastopol district, heavy movement of pears and other seasonal commodities. Grapes inspection is now beginning in the San Joaquin valley and the force of 60 inspections is taxed by the growing demand for certification.

The new fie laboratory will investigate t problems which most vitally a fect the industry on the Pacif coast.

Some localities are particular adapted to raising queen bees an bees for sale in packages, and t field staff will undoubtedly giv some attention to these growin industries.

THE TINYMITES

STORY by HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES by KING

They left the market gate be- id and started out to try to find ne other sights of interest. And didn't take them long. A small took them to a port and Scouty puted, "This is sport. Just look all the boats tied up. The ropes ist be real strong."

Each place to moor a boat was ed, and it was quite a sight. It filled the happy group of Tiny- tes. They scampered down the ks. Said Clowny, "Gee, it's ich too far to reach the end from ere we are. Why, I can see boats lined up for blocks and cks and blocks."

The Travel Man's face spread in iles. Said he, "Why walk for les and miles when every thing l be the same up there as it is e? I see a yacht moored right arby. Please come with me and ill try to fix it so we'll have a e." The bunch began to cheer. The yachtsman said, "I'm always d to give a ride to any lad. So, hop aboard now, all of you, and we'll steam on our way. The big Corinth Canal's nearby. We'll travel right down through it. I am sure that I can make you have a real good time today."

And then, the next thing that they knew, the wondrous yacht was steaming through the long canal. My, what a sight! The cut was four miles long. On either side the banks 'rose high, and slow but surely, slipped right by. Said Scouty, "Gee, we travel fast! Your engines must be strong."

The yachtsman said, "With this we're thrilled. It took about 12 years to build. 'Twas cut out of the solid earth and cost a fortune, too. The water's 26 feet deep. Just think how much it takes to keep the big canal filled up. From two large gulfs it rushes through."

outfield are combinations hard to beat. The Stars have not done much "powerhouse" slugging in this series but they have hit well in the pinches and their opponents haven'e, and that is why the count is two games to nothing.

Whittier is pretty sure to use McDonnell in every remaining contest, whether it is one, two or three. Although the tall sharpshooter had his troubles during the last half of the regular pennant race, he is still a tough customer to beat, and his control is better than Johnson's.

But even with McDonnell in the box, it is doubtful whether Whittier can take three games in succession from a team that plays ball like Santa Ana, and especially with the kind of pitching the Stars have been getting from Cornelius who will go right back to the well Monday night after his third straight triumph of the series.

It was in the catching department that Santa Ana critics figured the Stars had the biggest edge over the opposition. Thus far their opinion has been more than justified.

"Memphy" Hill made the outstanding defensive assist of the altercation when he came in fast to take Rasmussen's slow hit ball back of the mound in the fifth. Hill had to make the play on a bad hop but came up with the ball and easily tossed to Bill Cole for the putout.

Ray Johns has done the best fielding for Whittier. He made a beautiful catch on a wide throw from Arley Hill in the first inning that cut off a Santa Ana run, and a few innings later robbed Cole of at least a single with a jumping catch on a line drive.

OLDSMOBILE IN SEVENTH PLACE OVER COUNTRY

Executives of the local zone office of Olds Motor Works are gratified by reason of the receipt last week from the factory of a report showing that Oldsmobile has risen from fourteenth to seventh place in national registrations since 1926.

"The line now ranks from third to sixth place in 306 of America's leading trading centers," states J. E. Headley of the Headley Motor company, Oldsmobile dealers, continuing that, "the seventh position has regard for the entire country and for all makes of cars, from the lowest to the highest in price. We feel that this showing has resulted from faithful fulfillment of the factory pledge to design progressively, sell honestly and service sincerely. The car is a leader in a price field which is attracting new buyers from lower and higher-priced fields.

"There is one factor in the situation which we think in fairness should be mentioned: Many cars selling in about the same volume as Oldsmobile are distributed through from 50 to 100 per cent more retail outlets, and while Oldsmobile ranks in seventh place nationally, this large volume of business is divided among a relatively small number of dealers.

"The advance of Oldsmobile nationally from fourteenth to seventh position was marked by consistent advance from 1926 until last year," the local executive said, "when it ranked in ninth position. For the first four months of this year it moved up two steps on the sales ladder."

George W. Langer, charged with parking his car between 2 and 5 a. m. on a city street, in violation of a city ordinance, was fined $2 in police court yesterday, and Don Graves, charged with overtime parking, was given a $2 fine.

MEMORIAL IS BUILT TODAY TO EXPLORERS

OSLO, NORWAY, Aug. 23.—(UP)—A newly built memorial to three victims of the arctic's most adventurous aerial expedition stood on the ice burdened surface of White island (Kvitaeya) near Franz Josef Land today as explorers pieced together a 33 year old story of disaster and suffering in the far north.

The memorial was erected by the men of the Korn Arctic expedition who found the frozen bodies of Solomon August Andree, Swedish balloonist and explorer, and one of his two companions on an unsuccessful attempt to fly over the north pole in a balloon in 1897.

The body of the third flier, either K. Fraenkel or N. Stringberg was believed frozen in a small boat held deep in the ice where the exhausted men made their last camp.

The details of the story of the wrecking of Andree's balloon and the desperate, futile struggle back over the ice floes from the polar region was still hidden between the ice concealed pages of the explorers' log book and dairy. Dr. Horn will not attempt to examine the books fully until his expedition steamer, Brattvaag, reaches Norway about September 10 with the bodies.

Only one leaf of the long unopened diary was seen by the members of the Horn expedition before they dispatched news of their discovery by way of a small Norwegian fishing vessel that reached the coast yesterday. That page—the last leaf in the book—and the remains of the camp gave an incomplete story of the tragedy.

After Andree and his companions flew northward on July 11, 1897, in their balloon, on which sails had been placed in the erroneous belief that the craft could be guided, they progressed satisfactorily for at least two days, according to messages found in buoys long afterward and one note brought back by a carrier pigeon.

The nature of the wreck may be revealed only by the diary. Reports from the Horn expedition indicated the three men had walked a long distance southward from the point at which they were wrecked.

The page of the diary seen by Dr. Horn, had an entry giving the position of the balloon as 83 north, 33 east. Andree's balloon was well equipped for an emergency landing, having supplies for nine months and equipment for traveling across the ice.

It appeared to Dr. Horn that the men had tramped over the ice fields to the island, drawing their boat on a sled.

The explorers were said to have estimated that the balloon reached a point far to the north, a remarkable feat for any aerial exploration in the early days of airship travel.

After descent of the balloon the three stranded men—in much the same position as the marooned members of the dirigible Italia's artctic crew three years ago—probably walked most of the way to White island, it was believed.

TWO ARRESTED ON DRIVING CHARGES

Two men were arrested last night by officers on charges of driving automobiles while under the influence of liquor.

Andres Astorga, 41, of Tustin, charged with violation of section No. 112 of the Motor Vehicle act was arrested by Officers Foster, Murray and Murillo, of the Santa Ana police department and lodged in jail. He was found on West Second street, in the 1800 block.

Lyle G. Dunn, 31, of 101 Indianapolis avenue, Huntington Beach, was arrested by Ben Craig, state traffic officer, near Seal Beach and brought to the county jail.

NATIONAL PARKS WILL NOT CLOSE

Emphatic denial has just been given to the rumor that the national parks of the country would close after Labor day, reports the Automobile Club of Southern California.

A communication from Acting Secretary Dixon of the department of the interior states that the national parks are made available for the use of the visiting public just as long as weather conditions permit. Yellowstone, for instance, is freely accessible to visitors until September 19, and the public utilities catering to the comfort and convenience of visitors are not closed until after this date. Even after the closing date of the hotel and other accommodations, private automobiles carrying camping equipment are permitted until the snow closes the roads, usually about the middle of October. During this latter period informal living accommodations may also be obtained by motorists not desiring to camp.

Yosemite, Sequoia and General Grant in California, Mount Rainier in Washington, and Rocky Mountain in Colorado, are among the parks open throughout the winter months for snow and ice sports, while the South Rim of Grand Canyon National park in northern Arizona is accessible throughout the year to travelers by rail and motor.

MACHINE STOLEN

Earl Dawn, of Buena Park, reported the theft of a Trojan wood working machine from his home last night. He said it was valued at $375. The sheriff's office was today making an investigation.

CHICAGO CASH GRAIN

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—(UP)—Showing a much stronger tone on the Board of Trade today, wheat closed sharply higher despite profit taking sales and some hedging pressure. Commission houses and locals were good buyers. The report that a local crop expert would issue a statement next week showing 150,000,000 mu of wheat ot be used as feed, by far the largest on record, was an important factor. Corn also shot upwards more than 1½c but profit taking and selling on the bulges was met, though the market held a firm undertone, and the best prices were not maintained. September continues to act tight. Reports confirmed barren stalks and unfilled ears over large areas, creating bullish sentiment. Oats were active following wheat.

Receipts were wheat 6s cars, corn 258 and oats 78.

At the close wheat was 1⅝ to 1¼c higher, corn was ⅞ to 1⅛c higher and oats were ¼ to ⅝c higher. Provisions were steady.

NEW YORK STOCKS

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—(UP)—The stock market firmed up in today's short session under the leadership of U S Steel, which reached 168⅝, up ⅞ and a new high on the movement, holding well to the close despite tendency to take profits then.

The whole industrial list was carried up fractions to a point or more. Utilities were up a smuch as 2 points and a better tone was note in rails and oils, despite a few weak spots in the later.

BE ON TIME

Good things don't last long on the Real Estate market. Groves that produce,—sell, and this 15 acres, is that kind of grove. Its Valencia trees are large; water conditions are excellent; the grove is exceptionally uniform and next year's crop looks like a winner. If you are satisfied with 7 per cent net over all expenses and a grove clear with no cost to you in ten or twelve years, let's talk about this one. No. 4535.

SHERLOCK HOLMES—Case of the "Gloria Scott"

Holmes Reads Trevor's Story—III

BY SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE

I remembered his case, for it was one which made an immense sensation. He was a man of good family, who by an ingenious system of frauds had obtained huge sums from leading London merchants. He reminded me that he had got more than a quarter of a million pounds, and none was recovered

"Well, where d'ye suppose the balance is," he asked. "Right between my finger and thumb! And if you've money, my son, you can do anything. A man who can do anything isn't going to wear his breeches out in a mouldy old coffin of a China coaster, you can lay to that..."

'No, sir, such a man will look after himself and his chums. I'd a partner," said he, "a rare good man, true as stock to a barrel. He's got the money, and where do you think he is at this moment? Why, he's the chaplain of this ship—the chaplain, no less!" © 1930 By Sir Arthur Conan Doyle

At first I thought his talk meant nothing, but after he had tested me and sworn me in with all possible solemnity, he told me how a dozen of the prisoners had hatched a plot to seize the ship before they came aboard. Prendergast was the leader and his money was the motive power.

EVENING SALUTATION

"This country would be vastly benefited if about 50 per cent of its organizations could disband—particularly those of women."

—Mrs. Walter Ferguson.

PREPARE NOW FOR TUESDAY

Today's Register is very largely political in its advertising and in a great deal of the news and editorial matter. The candidates and their attitude are becoming pretty well known by the voters of the county. This issue of The Register will help to make them more so.

Take the group of men as a whole running for the various offices, and they are capable and of good character. There is a disposition on the part of a great many people in the county to vote against all candidates holding office, because they are so opposed to machine domination and ring rule.

There is no one in Orange county more opposed to the exercise of power against the public's interests by machine organization than we are. In some offices this influence can be and has been used for the protection of the evil and the thwarting of the good.

The principal offices where the influences of the machine can work are in those of district attorney, sheriff, and the board of supervisors. The people of the county, as a whole, have no voice in the selection of the members of the board of supervisors as a whole. They are elected in their own districts, and so there is no voice or power by all the people upon any particular candidate.

For sheriff and district attorney this is not the case. All people can vote, and they have the power to vote for a continuation of present conditions dominated in the manner in which they are, or for a change. The one man running for district attorney, upon whom the forces desiring things to continue as they are have centered their fire, has been Harry C. Westover. While we are not emphasizing him as against Mr. Haynes, we do believe by the activities which we have observed that the influences that desire to continue prevailing conditions recognize Mr. Westover as the chief opponent, and believe there will be a different situation if he is nominated and elected.

On the other hand, there are some men in public office in Orange county whom we believe, however friendly they may be to any political group, run their own offices without domination, and the voters of the county know who these capable officers are. We are not taking sides as between them and their opponents except in the case of the county assessor, because the attack upon him has been so unwarranted and vicious.

A WORD CONCERNING THE CONTEST ON THE ASSESSORSHIP

For several very good reasons, The Register recommends and even urges the support of James Sleeper for re-election as assessor of Orange county.

First and foremost, because his office is one of the most important of all the county offices; and in its administration he has given ample evidence of good judgment, fairness, a thorough knowledge of property values, and the courage of his convictions.

Second, because The Register believes in fairness and sincerity; and we know—as all intelligent voters must know— that the attacks made upon his official conduct are utterly inconsistent and illogical, and therefore, in effect, unfair and misleading—however sincere they MAY be by reason of ignorance.

To make an area-percentage comparison of the valuation of the Irvine ranch lands with the valuations of the rest of the county is the last word in misleading unfairness. It is, in effect, to say that a few thousand acres of agricultural lands and many thousands of acres of hill-brush-rock lands should be valued for taxation on the same area-basis as the rest of the county, which is largely a metropolitan area studded with scores of cities and towns with all their millions of improvements.

And to charge the assessor with favoring the big land owners and oil campanies, under whose constant political and legal and financial fire he has stood like a rock for over twenty years is self-contradictory and absurd, but nevertheless false and misleading.

A man who would use such tactics must be lacking either in intelligence or in ability, and lacking either of these qualities he is unfitted for the important office of assessor, which exercises such tremendous power over our homes, out properties, and our constitutional rights.

Mr. Sleeper has demonstrated not only his intelligence and ability, but also his integrity and his courage, qualities absolutely prerequisite to the faithful discharge of the duties of the office of county assessor.

DEMOCRACY AND THE PRESIDENT

Dr. Will Durant spoke at the Williamston Institute on the proposition: "Is Democracy a Falure?" Dr. Durant proposed that education be made a qualification for public office.

"The plan appears undemocratic," he said, "It would not be if we had democracy in education and saw to it by municipal and state scholarships that the capable children of the poor would find the way open to higher education. Democracy should not mean that we are all fit for office, it should mean equal opportunity for all of us to make ourselves fit for office."

Dr. Durant has a happy faculty of stating matters concisely. That faculty is backed by ability to make observations. Embodied in this same address was a prediction regarding President Hoover, which is important. He said that President Hoover would emerge "as one of the most capable executives in history." There are those who are confident of this prediction. There are others who will have to wait for history to prove it.

"THE HOUSE WHERE I WAS BORN"

There is always an interest on the part of men and women in the house in which they were born. President Coolidge is spending his summer in Plymouth, Vt., in the house in which he was born. It is a simple place, has none of what we call the "modern improvements," yet it has about it all the air of romance. The White House will never begin to have the significance which this simple house that marks his birthplace will always have. These sentiments are shared with him by thousands.

A recent writer points out that these hallowed recollections of one's birthplace are rapidly becoming a thing of the past. The growth of large cities, and the frequent removals from place to place, make no place especially memorable. Most babies today are born in great hospitals, in which they are tagged on foot and wrist, and then taken after some weeks to an apartment, from which the family may move the week following.

No longer do the old lines, "I remember, I remember, the place where I was born," have any significance, nor do they suggest sacred memories. One can have no pride in Room 41 in some great hospital which covers two city blocks, and where in infancy he was herded with twenty or thirty other youngsters behind glass doors through which adoring fathers are permitted to gaze at their own offspring. With it has gone much that is sacred. One who has bought the old family home in the country, and makes it the place for his summer vacation, wrote a letter to a friend who was born abroad, saying, "I am going back to the place where I was born, and I am sorry that this pleasure cannot be yours." This applies to thousands of Americans who were born during the last twenty years.

This is one of the changes which our new machine age has brought; and what it all means can only be understood by those who permit their imagination to play. How fortunate are those who still can have these memories. Something has been lost, and the world is somewhat poorer because of the loss.

"MICKEY MOUSE" IN COURT

The children will be interested in the fact that "Mickey Mouse" has been getting into trouble lately. A correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor writing from London, says we need not be greatly concerned for the trouble is only concerned with the shape of his feet and the style of his hatwear, and not a fatal malady, nor a criminal offense.

A British judge and several well-known attorneys in one of the most historical law courts in the world "pondered the question," says this correspondent, "whether the famous mouse's feet were like 'soup plates' or 'duck's feet'."

The question was, whether a man who has developed a "Squeaky" similar to "Mickey Mouse" was infringing on the "personality" of "Mickey Mouse."

Judgment was finally given that there was no infringement on Dean's registered design of "Mickey Mouse." So the children can have both "Mickey Mouse" and "Squeaky." The latter seems to be related but not a twin of "Mickey Mouse."

Newspaper Big Aid To Radio

Pasadena Star News

The newspaper, if you will but think of it, is in embarrassing position to set adequately before the public the services which it renders. A newspaper, in a way, is a personified being—an institution with personality and human attributes. Naturally, a typical American newspaper does not boast of itself. It must be advertised, in the main, as Shakespeare says, "by its loving friends."

Such friends are not lacking. One such staunch friend of the American newspaper press is Dr. Lee De Forest, pioneer inventor and world-famous wireless expert. Dr. De Forest says the debt of radio broadcasting to the newspaper "is beyond all computation."

As he decried the use of radio broadcast "for direct and blatant advertising," Dr. De Forest amplified, in a public address in Toronto to the Institute of Radio Engineers, the obligations which radio is under to the American newspaper. He cited daily program notices, program reviews and the generous space in newspapers devoted to radio. Dr. De Forest went on to say that he sincerely felt this debt from radio to newspapers will be partially repaid "only when certain forms of adverstising most obviously ill-suited for radio's medium go to the printed sheet." Dr. De Forest continued:

The influence of radio on the press has now become profound. While its inherent limitations will never permit it to supplant newsprint, yet radio has largely eliminated extras on prize-fight results and has shown a curtailment of interest in baseball news. But radio has its limitation—it must present its programs when the broadcasters choose and not when the listeners desire it.

Dr. De Forest has presented very cogently one phase of the relation of the radio to the newspaper. He deserves the thanks of all those who are engaged in producing newspapers.

They Come From Afar

Oakland Tribune

The figures which show students at the University of California come from every county in the state, save one, every state in the union, save three; and from thirty-seven foreign countries command attention, but in the details other points stand out.

Alameda county has more than twice as many students in the University than any other county, San Francisco and Los Angeles counties following in order.

Presence of the University in the Eastbay thus is shown to mean opportunities for higher education to a larger proportion of the population. Because it is easier and less expensive to go to a university which is close at hand, this county gains, though there is another factor to be considered. Because the University is here large numbers of families have moved to the Eastbay. Again we gain.

For the year Alameda county had 3814 students in the University; San Francisco, 1842; and Los Angeles, 1046. Berkeley was welcoming young men and women from all but one of the counties of California and all but three of the states of the nation.

A Broth That Too Many Cooks Could Spoil!

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

SUMMER RAIN

When all out doors has long been dry,
And then, on hill and plain
The great clouds gather in the sky
And loose a silver rain,
In every hollow of the ground
Beneath the bush and brake,
And on the grass and all around
There lies a shining lake.
And there and there and everywhere
These tiny rippling bowls,
The kindly elements prepare
For babies' wading holes.

The water, scattered by the storm
Is sparkling, pure and sweet,
And not too cold and not too warm
For rosy wading feet.
And bending bushes, newly dry,
Are velvet to the touch,
With always plenty handy by
For little hands to clutch.
And although one may slip and fall,
And shriek with wild alarm,
A little water after all
Can do but little harm.

The grass and flowers love the rain
It charms the happy birds,
And loud they pipe a glad refrain—
One almost hears the words.
The frogs and rabbits like it too,
And gaily dance and leap,
For better than a little dew
Are pools two inches deep.
But babies with their wee pink feet,
And toes absurdly small,
When rain dissolves the summer heat—
They like it best of all.

"Prosperity By Proclamation"

By WILLIAM TRUFANT FOSTER and WADDILL CATCHINGS

The Federal government can help business by broadcasting FACTS about business; but the government is sure to hurt business by broadcasting OPINIONS about business.

Business needs the facts about money and credit which are published by the Federal Reserve Board. Equally helpful are the data on production, sales, stocks on hand and markets, which are published by the Department of Commerce. Education of this sort is a proper function of the Government.

For the past three years, however, business has received from the Federal government too few facts and too many opinions.

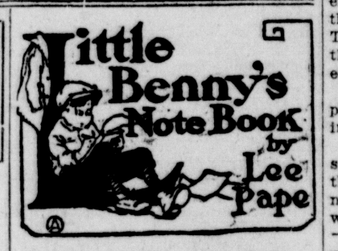

For example: Last December, Mr. Hoover expressed the opinion that business was back to normal. In January, Mr. Mellon said, "I see nothing in the present situation that is either menacing or warrants pessimism." A few weeks later, Secretary Davis spoke optimistically about "every major industry." In February, Secretary Lamont said, "There is nothing in the situation to be disturbed about." In March, he said that business would be normal in two months. This forecast was followed by another optimistic opinion from the White House, and a statement by Mr. Julius Barnes, Chairman of Mr. Hoover's Survey Conference, that "the spring of 1930 marks the end of a period of grave concern."

Yet throughout this era of Prosperity by Presidential Proclamation, the FACTS about business were not at all cheering. Production, prices, employment, payrolls, profits, building contracts, and a score of other business indexes, taken as a whole, gave no basis for optimism. With the best will in the world, statistical experts could find no evidence of improvement. But from no branch of the Government did business receive a complete and impartial statement of FACTS.

The result was an unwarranted boom in the stock market during the first quarter of this year, and an unnecessary dragging out of the present business depression.

It would have been far better for business, had business been forced to face the FACTS—ALL the facts, unpleasant as well as pleasant—without the confusion caused by official OPINIONS.

Ma was pushing crooked things strate and strate things crooked, and she sed to pop, Willyum, I think Ive solved the mistery.

Dont tell me youve found out why its been so hard to save any money the last 20 years or so, pop sed, and ma sed, Im referring to the babys tooth. Gladdis and I made up our mind there must be some dubble meening behind all this delay in the tooth coming through. For all we knew it mite be growing up insted of down, and this afternoon we payed a little visit to Madam Seero.

Yee gods the fortune teller, pop sed, and ma sed, Why not, she claims she can cleer up all misteries about lost articles, and I must say the babys tooth certeny has all the earmarks of a lost article. So we meerly told her we had lost something without remotely alluding to the name tooth. And my deer it was uncanny how quickly she came to the piont. She came out of her customery trance like a whirlwind, clapping her hands and saying, I see it, I see it, it gleems like a jewel, its a precious stone, its in a dark place, like a closit.

She ment a ring or something of that kind, its the usual bunk, pop sed, and ma sed, She ment nuthing of the kind, a babys tooth certeny gleems like a jewel, and its made of ivory, izzent it?

Is ivory a precious stone? pop sed, and ma sed, Its at least a semmy precious stone. And if you say a babys mouth izzent as dark as a closit it just goes to show youve never been in one. And after Madam Seero came out of another short trance and sed, All is well, have patience and the lost shall be restored. Wich of corse ment that the tooth would come out in the natural way although it hadent by the time we got back to Gladdises house, but Im going to call up rite now and see if it has by this time.

Wich she did, but it hadent.

Thoughts On Modern Life

By GLENN FRANK

FLAMING FINAN CE OF 1920-1930

The outstanding fact of the economic decade just ending is that this period of amazing prosperity credit expanded faster than business expanded.

We must see clearly why this unprecedented credit expansion took place if we are to enter the next decade with wiser policies.

I commend the opening chapter of Paul M. Mazur's "America Looks Abroad," as one of the clearest pictures yet drawn of this adventure in flaming finance. The basic facts, as Mr. Mazur suggests, are these:

During the first half of 1929, there were more than 16,000,000 stockholders in the United States. Assuming one stockholder to a family, this meant that more than half the population of the United States was personally interested in the security markets.

The banks, long looked upon as agencies for lending capital, began to play the role of go-between for putting the call loans of their customers into the stock market.

Business institutions, ordinarily averse to speculation, began to let their surplus funds out for the high rates that speculative demand was willing to pay.

Security prices skyrocketed. In 1927, they ran well over ten times the current earnings. By 1929, they ran all the way from ten, twenty, thirty, forty, fifty, and, in extreme cases, seventy-five times the current earnings of the stocks. The average was probably something under twenty times current earnings.

There factors, among others, played a part in this fantastic rise in security prices.

(1) The American public had seemingly come to believe that the earnings of American businesses and industries could and would go on forever increasing at the breathless rate of the more active post-war years. American stock-buyers were willing, therefore, to discount the future earnings of the companies whose securities they bought. The beckoning flame of unearned increment lured them on. Everywhere men clutched for ever more credit, and the credit structure stretched thinner and thinner to meet the demand.

(2) The federal income tax provision that profits from the sale of securities are taxable as current income unless the securities have been held more than two years, in which case they are subject only to a 12½ per cent capital gain tax, led many men who pay a 25 per cent income tax to hold securities for two years, and so save tax expenditure. This withdrew many securities from the market and shortened the supply of stocks already popular and resulted in their prices rising higher. Men holding stocks to get the benefit of this two-year rule borrowed heavily to finance new stock purchases and thus created a greater demand for credit, and the credit structure stretched a bit thinner.

(3) The investment trusts which represented billions of capital in 1928 and 1929 centered their stock investments on a relatively narrow range of securities, mainly the big companies whose securities were already popular, thus making them scarcer and higher in price.

In the delirious dream of unearned increment, too many Americans got out on a limb with their marginal purchases.

We know now, as we did not know before, that financial credit and economic reality must be driven abreast.

OUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

EVENING GAMES

The movies and the radio and the motor car fill so much of the time of the young people that we are in danger of forgetting how to entertain ourselves for an evening at home. Nothing can ever take the place of that. When all the movies have been seen—and it is astonishing how soon that can be done—when all the radio artists have come and gone—and that too will take shorter time than we realize, the home evening comes and stays. Let us enjoy it.

Of course there must be company. The boy down street and the girls across the way, and the spcial chums must be invited. But there is to be no formality about it. The piano is cleared and the songs laid handy, the older they are the better. Somebody squeezes the lemons and somebody cuts a cake and all is deary.

First there are games to be played. The old ones of course. How excited a set of youngsters can be in a game of fruit basket. They will laugh easier, with far more delight at a good catch than they will at the broadest joke of the films. And when they play Bird, Fish or Beast, the hilarity is heart-warming.

There may be a haughty young person of the modern moderns who turns a scornful eye upon parlor games, but let him once get started on a round of them—Three Questions, Hunt the Slipper, Authors, What Am I Thinking About? and see. He will be scrambling for a chair, fighting to save his forfeit with all the animation and vigor of a healthy young brigand.

When everybody is panting, worn out with laughter, the lemonade and cake are served. Boys do the serving, girls clear up—of course a certain boy will help a certain girl with the dishes, and that's all right.

Everything cleared away it is time to sing. Mother sits at the piano, if she can possibly manage a tune, and the children sing. Begin with one everybody ought to know, hum if you can't remember the words, but make a joyful noise. Remember the rounds. They are lots of fun. Get hold of that book of community songs that are gathered during the war, and sing them through. Do all the stunts. Enjoy the mistakes for there is nothing serious in the evening's entertainment. The more merriment the better.

Stand up and sing Home Sweet Home. Or Auld Lang Syne, or God Be With You, or any other fine old parting song, and say good-night. The children will ask when they can do it again and you say, "Oh sometime next week." If you establish a home night like that I'll promise you that the boys and girls of high school age will be there every time.

It is all very well for people to say that our children are too sophisticated, too spoiled for simple pleasures. Who gave them the other sort? Let the same people offer them a genuine good time, a good time to which they contribute, and see what happens. All that is needed is a good leader. Or a good hostess who remembers.

ON THE SIDELINES

LET GOOD ENOUGH ALONE—Recent developements have not caused us to become more enamored of the radio.

On Monday evening of last week the Columbia network broadcast an electrical storm, all over the country. But it was not down on the program. Sponsored by Dame Nature, a tremendous demonstration of lightning and static effects suddenly cut into the middle of a New York network program. Thousands of radio fans sitting before their receivers in "sunny California" sat up in amazement as the crashing crescendo of reverbrations echoed in their loud speakers.

And there you are! Getting thunder storms, from far distant New York, here in California over the radio!

Next thing some one will be using the same means to bring to California some of the frightfully hot weather which has recently prevailed throughout the middle west. The idea does not appeal.

IT'S ALL OVER NOW—And so the good people of Ventura who asked that gambling houses be legalized in that city have concluded that the "long felt want" of and for Ventura is not the re-establishment of gambling houses.

Plans of the council to vote upon the request were dropped when Councilman H. E. Albro told the members that R. W. Harthorn, hardware man, with whom the proposal originated, had asked that no action be taken.

The request and subsequent developments remind one of the couplet:

"If so quickly I were done for what on earth was I begun for?"

THE REALLY IMPORTANT POINT—At this time, when we are all busy reading of the claims for political preferment put forth by rival candidates or their representatives, it is refreshing to read a full, clear and succinct account of the arguments adduced by a speaker.

Such as the following, for example, which was evidently written by a lady, and appeared in a newspaper published not to exceed one hundred miles away:

"The 'Angel' is a blonde, and attracted much attention by her appearance as well as by her utterances. She was attired in a modish black frock and wore a string of pearls as her sole ornament if one excepts her hair, softly knotted at the nape of her neck."

There is some more of the story, but it is along similar lines. And it is all right. Who cares what the lady SAID, so long as we know what she wore?
